Elks to sponsor Bend ball team

Bend will have a baseball team this year and it will be sponsored by the Elks, just as in former years when local teams won renown on state circuit diamonds.

Ready for play with the senior Bend team will be one of the strongest outfits ever to represent this city, even in Mid-Columbia league and Oregon State league days. With four first string pitchers, Paul Gehrman, Bob Houtchens, Jim Farmer and Harold Barfknecht ready for action. For catchers, Wally Kramer and Les McConnell will be on deck.

Other Elks "Rarin' to go" are Bill Hatch, Jim Byers, Bill Byers, Frank Donahue, Ted Myers, Muriel Nehl, Jack Gordon, Cliff Piland, Bob Douglass, Claude Gant, Sam Blucher, Elmer Brown, Ned Douglass, Don Ackley, Willard Ferneau, Pete Rold, Pershing Andrews and Chuck Curry.

The team has its equipment and is ready to go — with one exception: A diamond is still lacking, but the squad has the assurance of the city that one will be put in shape soon.

Madras to get army airport

This county seat of Jefferson county has been awarded an airport by the federal government, according to a telegram received here today by Nestor Seaman, city recorder from Sen. Wayne Morse. Upon the recommendation of a civil aeronautic administration official, a portion of the Madras army air field, with appropriate runways, buildings and other facilities has been awarded to Madras for use as a public airport.

The big air field was built during the war at a tremendous cost for the use of bombers.

County museum to open in Bend on Saturday

The Deschutes County Museum, on the corner of Hariman Street and Greenwood Avenue in Bend, will be open to the public starting Saturday. Hours will be from 1 to 5 p.m. daily except Monday, with evening hours available by appointment.

Mrs. Edna Bronson will be chairman of the hostess committee for the Saturday opening. A number of members of the Deschutes Pioneers Association will be on hand to explain the relics on display.

Persons interested in making gifts or loans are asked to call Mrs. Laura Wonsler, secretary of the Deschutes Pioneers Association, or Mrs. Ivy Grover, museum curator. The association, which has some 750 members, has been active in developing the museum and acquiring exhibits. The building was made available by Deschutes County. Evening appointments may be made by calling the caretakers, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Larson, at 382-3375, or Mrs. Wonsler day-time at 382-2700. An official grand opening will be held later in the summer.

BLM resists 'show of hands'

Bureau of Land Management officials resisted attempts at last night's meeting here to show support of, or opposition to, the BLM's recreation plans for the Lower Deschutes.

The 96 miles of river bank extends from Warm Springs to the Columbia River, with the BLM controlling 45 per cent of it.

Chadwick McBurney, the BLM official leading the meeting, sidestepped several efforts of a Portland fisherman to get a "show of hands" on the plan, despite heavy applause at each request. He said written comments from individuals and organizations would be more meaningful.

Garvan Bucaria, a Redmond teacher, drew strong applause when he showed pictures of congested development on the upper river.

"The Upper Deschutes has had enough development for the whole river," he said. "Why work on the rest of it?"

Jim Ellen's, The Dalles, gave McBurney petitions, with 500 signatures, asking for no more motor routes on the Deschutes.

John Wallen, president of the Northwest Steelhead Council of Trout Unlimited, was spokesman for its 4,000 members. He asked for a two-year moratorium on development until it can be determined "what the people really want."

Wallen said the BLM has not correlated any plans with what the Warm Springs tribes may do on the other side of the river.

"We must conserve for the longest period of time the overwhelming beauty and resources of one of the nations' most famous fishing streams," he said. "We may learn the majority favors preservation of pristine conditions over put-and-take fishing."

A speaker for the Portland Anglers Club said the plan seems to be socially, rather than environmentally, oriented. He stressed the fragility of the desert and said protection of the land's health should be the first concern.

"What will you do if the weight of testimony is overwhelmingly opposed to your plan?" Asked one young man. McBurney said there probably would be limited improvement to provide sanitary facilities.

The Bureau's timetable calls for submission of the plan and written comment to the state director by July 1. He will formulate an action plan by Oct. 1. McBurney urged everyone to send a statement to the Prineville BLM office.

Longtime police chief retires

Bend Police Chief Dave Malkin will end his 17-year tenure as the city's top cop and take the helm of a small department in Central California next month, where he can better care for his elderly parents.

Malkin 53, will leave the job in mid-May and depart as one of the longest-serving chiefs of police in the state of Oregon. He said the choice was not an easy one.

"We will leave behind a lot of friends and a great community," Malkin said. "We leave with a lot of mixed feelings. But we're doing something we have to do."

Malkin said he and his family made the decision for the sake of his parents, who are 78 and 84 years old. With no other family members to care for them, Malkin has been making more frequent trips to California and decided the time had come to move closer.

City Manager Larry Patterson called Malkin an asset to the city as well as a confidant and friend. Patterson said Malkin will be missed.

"I hate to see him pick up sticks and leave. I have considered him not only a good working partner but also a friend," Sheriff Darrell Davidson said.

As chief in Bend since 1979, Malkin led the department through a population boom that saw the town go from a small mill town to a regional hub facing city-size crime problems.
