Baseball

Bend (8-4 overall) quickly began chipping away at Redmond's four-run lead after the first inning. The Lava Bears added two runs in the second inning, another in the third, then took an 8-6 lead in the fourth inning on a Ryland Gustafson two-run dinger.
As the lead evaporated, the young Panthers, with three freshmen in their lineup, were tested — especially freshmen pitchers Joseph Teixeira and Ryker Altizer, who came out of the bullpen to pitch the final four innings.
After Gustafson's go-ahead home run, the freshmen pitchers allowed just one run to keep the Panthers within striking distance.
"There is a lot of learning going on," Stanley said. "Not just learning the game, but learning how to compete because they haven't been at the varsity level. Our freshmen pitchers showed a lot of poise."
It was far from a clean game for the Panthers. They committed five errors in the field, their pitchers hit four Bend batters and only five of Bend's nine runs were earned.

Clutch hitting started the late rally for the Panthers. Eberle and Erhardt both drove in runs in the fifth inning to help the Panthers retake the lead, 9-8. A sacrifice fly off the bat of senior Austin Carter provided what would prove to be the winning run in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Redmond held the Lava Bears scoreless in the top of the seventh to end the game.

"We hit the ball in the right spots, moved the runners over," Erhardt said. "I definitely have to say that the hits were something that got momentum going."

With three games left in the shortened season, all against Intermountain Conference opponents, the Panthers hope that the momentum from the signature win carries into the final week and into the summer.

"They didn't just roll over, that would have been really easy to do," Manley said. "Bend chipped away and took the lead, then we stopped it and responded. That is what good teams do, and that is what we want to be one day, a good team. I think we are getting close to that."

Las Vegas did lose Angel McCoughtry for the season this week after she tore her right ACL. The Aces also saw guard Kayla McBride sign with Minnesota. The Lynx also picked up Natalie Achonwa and Aerial Powers in other key offseason moves.

Here are other things to look for in the league's 25th season.

New owners

It was also a busy offseason with two teams sold to new ownership groups. Former Atlanta Dream guard Renee Montgomery made history as part of a three-member investor group that was approved to purchase the team.

The ownership change follows pressure on former Sen. Kelly Loeffler, a Republican who angered WNBA players with her opposition to the league's racial justice initiatives, to sell her share of the Dream. The Las Vegas Aces were also sold to Raiders owner Mark Davis from MGM International.

Social justice

The league also plans to continue to support the WNBA Justice Movement. It's the platform through which the league will continue to lead important work in the community to combat racial and gender inequality, promote advocacy for LBGTQ+ rights, and champion reform in systems where injustice persists.

"It's one of the important things I know to the players," Engelbert said of the social justice movement. "We talk to them all the time about not being one and done around social justice. Continuing the social justice efforts and integrating that in with the campaign and to lead important work with the community."

Commissioner's Cup

The league will also debut the WNBA Commissioner's

Cup. Teams will play 10 designated regular-season matchups before the Olympic break that will count towards standings for that contest. The top team by record in those games in each conference will play each other in a championship game right after the break ends. There will be player prize pools.

Changing it up

Both Dallas and Atlanta will have new coaches at the helm with Vickie Johnson taking over the Wings and Mike Petersen in charge of the Dream. Johnson was hired in December while Petersen was named the interim coach when Nicki Collen left for Baylor earlier this month.
