where in a future home. Well, after recently moving into my new home and requesting she return it, she informed me that it was hers now. That was never my intention. She has gotten my other sister and our parents to side with her, and they're making me feel like a bad person for even asking for it. Now I'm left to shop for a new machine, while the original sits in her new large home gym along with her Peloton.

had room to put it some-

She never offered to buy it, ever. She just insists it's hers now because I "gave" it to her. I still need a rowing machine, and I get upset every time I look at new ones online. It just feels wrong that I have to buy another one. What should I do?

- Buff Bro in Illinois Dear Bro: Buy another one. If it wasn't made absolutely clear to Sissy that you expected the rowing machine to be returned at a later date, she was within her rights to conclude that it was a gift. If you DID make that clear to her when you moved out, then shame on her. But either way, it's not worth a family feud. Dear Abby: Some close friends have an adult child with a severe disability. They've been upfront about it and his need to be present in the community. I applaud their attitude, but on a personal level, I don't know how to handle it. They have a big family celebration coming up, assuming things continue to improve COVID-wise. I'm tired of not knowing how to interact with this person. Other people laugh and joke and seem to have a nice relationship with him. I struggle to understand, and I don't know if I should just be honest and say I don't know what to do or say. I feel I'm missing out on what others see. How do I move along?

- Awkward in Massachusetts Dear Awkward: I don't think it's necessary to explain to your friends that you feel uncomfortable interacting with their disabled child. I do think you should tell them you would like to interact more fully with him and ASK FOR SUG-GESTIONS on how you can achieve that. They wouldn't find it offensive. In fact, they may appreciate your being forthright, because I'm willing to bet not everyone has been as compassionate as you — or as direct.

MOON ALERT: There are no restrictions to shopping or important decisions today. The Moon is in Capricorn.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR FRIDAY, MAY 28, 2021: You are friendly, assertive and many of you are very stylish. You know how to make an impression. You are knowledgeable, versatile and multitalented, which allows you to pursue many different paths with success. This year, it's time to build alliances with others, because these connections will help you achieve your goals. Let teamwork and cooperation with others be your theme.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Today you will enjoy the beauty of your daily surroundings, as well as the company of neighbors, siblings and relatives. You feel someone cares about you, which is why you want to tell them that they matter to you as well. Tonight: Re friendly with everyone

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ As the financial wizard of the zodiac, make the most of your moneymaking ideas today! You will attract money and favorable financial situations to you, especially something from the past, perhaps something that didn't pan out before. Tonight: Make money!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★ Today the Sun in your sign and your ruler Mercury is lined up with fair Venus. Yay you! This stimulates your interest in art, music and poetry in a big way. Tonight: Share your appreciation of beauty with someone.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★ Solitude in beautiful surroundings will be a soothing escape for you today. (Even 15 minutes will be wonderful.) You will feel replenished by physical beauty or beautiful ideas. You also might think about a secret crush you have on someone. Tonight: Pamper yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ Today you're quick to see the big picture and share your ideas with friends or groups. You might see a better way to relate to others, particularly if this is the goal of your group. You will also enjoy dealing with younger people today, especially if they're involved in the arts. Tonight: Enjoy socializing!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ A conversation with a boss, parent, VIP or a member of the police will be friendly and warm today. It will be apparent that you are on the same page and have the same concerns. Someone might seek out your advice about how to make something look better. Tonight: "Let's paint it!"

LIBRA (Sept. 23-0ct. 22)

★★★★ Because your appreciation of beauty is heightened today, you will enjoy galleries, museums or looking at art online. Some of you also will explore scientific studies. ("Please pass the NaCl.") Tonight: Check out Wikiart.org. You'll love it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Discussions about how to share something will favor you today. (You'll be laughing all the way to the bank.) This is a good time to explore dealing with shared property, taxes, debt and insurance matters. Meanwhile, romance will be passionate and affectionate. Tonight: Be still my beating heart.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ You might surprise yourself at how articulate you are when talking to a partner, spouse or close friend. It will be easy for you to tell them how much you care for them and how happy you are that they are in your life. (After that, you can borrow a 50.) Tonight: Enjoy meaningful conversations with someone close to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ You will be productive in your job today. Even your health will feel better because you have a better sense of balance in everything you do, not just physically but intellectually. Tonight: You will see what needs to be done and what needs to be avoided.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ This is a fabulous day for you, especially if you work in the arts, because you are in touch with your creative muse. However, you also will enjoy teaching or sharing playful activities with kids. Sports will appeal to you. Tonight: You will be affectionate with friends and lovers.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

*** You will do what you can to make where you live more attractive today because this will please you. However, it will also please you to be warm and affectionate with family members and let them know how much you care. (Everyone wants to know they are loved.) Tonight: Entertain at home.

STATE BRIEFING

Oregon Shakespeare Festival will resume in-person performances

The Oregon Shakespeare Festival announced Thursday the company would resume in-person performances in July.

The festival closed its theaters on March 12, 2020, because of the coronavirus pandemic. The musical "Fannie" will be its first show back in front of live audiences.

The show, inspired by the life of civil rights activist Fannie Lou Hamer, is directed by Henry Godinez with musical direction from Felton Offard. It will star E. Faye Butler from July 1 to Aug. 28, and Greta Oglesby from Sept. 1 to Oct. 9.

"Fannie' is a perfect show with which to reconvene in-person at OSF after a year of theater shutdowns due to the COVID-19 pandemic and of urgent social uprisings," said the festival's artistic director Nataki Garrett in a press

"Fannie" is written by Cheryl L. West and will be staged outdoors at the Allen Elizabethan

The festival said it would announce "special ticketing offers for wildfire first responders and COVID-19 essential workers soon."

Safety measures will still be in place when the theater opens in July. Audience members will be required to present proof of vaccination or a negative COVID-19 test.

After "Fannie," the festival will present its "first-ever holiday-season special," called "It's Christmas, Carol!" from Nov. 28, 2021 to Jan. 2, 2022.

At the time of the accident last summer, James Andrew "Jimmy" Bickers had worked for Redmond-based River Roofing for about one month. Bickers, 38, was experienced with manual labor but was relatively new to roofing, according to a February report by Oregon Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

River Roofing is a subcontractor on the $114-million Caldera project, of which Kirby Nagelhout is the general contractor overseeing con-

On Aug. 4, Bickers and four other roofers were working "cart crew" on the Caldera gym roof, moving materials where needed.

Around 6:58 a.m., the crew lifted a heavy wheeled cart loaded with more than 900 pounds of material over an 8-inch gap at the crest of the gym roof. After setting down the cart, it began to roll uncontrolled toward the edge of the roof. The other four roofers moved clear, but it's thought Bickers held on longer, attempting to keep the cart from reaching the edge, according to the Oregon OSHA inspection report. His momentum carried him down with the cart, and he fell 45 feet to the concrete.

A 911 call was made at 6:59 a.m. Paramedics pronounced Bickers dead at the scene.

In February, Oregon OSHA cited Kirby Nagelhout with one "serious" safety citation in the accident, and fined it $2,450. River Roofing was also cited for a serious violation and fined $3,600.

Both firms appealed the citation, but earlier this month, Kirby Nagelhout dropped its appeal and a final order on the citation was issued, according to Oregon OSHA.

The lawsuit, filed by Lake Oswego-based personal injury attorney Tom D'Amore, asserts Kirby Nagelhout exposed employees at the Caldera project to numerous hazardous conditions.

"Defendant Kirby Nagelhout Construction failed to provide James Bickers with a safe place of employment in compliance with every applicable order, decision, direction, standard, rule or regulation," the lawsuit states.

Founded in 1986 in Bend, Kirby Nagelhout is today one of the top 20 largest construction companies in the state.

The lawsuit was filed in Multnomah County because the firm performs "regular and sustained" business in the Portland area, the lawsuit states.

The new Caldera High School is scheduled to open in September.

Before becoming community development director, Lelack served as a planning director for the county and the city of Redmond.

"I am tremendously honored to be selected as Deschutes

County's next Administrator. I look forward to leading our talented and dedicated team and collaborating with our community partners to implement the Commissioners' ambitious priorities," Lelack said in a statement. "Together, we will build upon the great work that is underway across our region."

Lelack was chosen as the county's only finalist for the position earlier this month, and will replace current County Administrator Tom Anderson when he retires in September.
