WORLD BRIEFING

Harris warns against coming to U.S., seeks 'hope at home' for Guatemalans

Vice President Kamala Harris offered an optimistic outlook for improved cooperation with Guatemala on addressing the spike in migration to the U.S. after her meeting abroad with Guatemalan President Alejandro Giammattei on Monday. She also delivered a direct warning to migrants: "Do not come. Do not come."

Her comments, during a press conference after she met privately with the Guatemalan president, underscored the challenge that remains even as Harris engages in substantive talks with the Guatemalan and Mexican presidents during a three-day visit to the region this week.

"I want to emphasize that the goal of our work is to help Guatemalans find hope at home," Harris said. In conjunction with Harris's trip, the Justice Department announced it would create an anti-corruption task force and an additional task force to combat human trafficking and drug smuggling in the region.

She frequently donates or makes meals for homeless shelters like Bethlehem Inn.

"I have a spot in my heart for the homeless community in Bend," Fine said. "I know how fortunate I am, so whenever I can) help, I do."

Around the holidays in late 2020, Fine saw that a homeless man died in Bend due to freezing temperatures. So she and a friend organized a drive to gather gloves, jackets and sleeping bags, along with COVID-19 protective equipment like face masks, she said.

"It would be detrimental for a homeless person to get COVID," Fine said.

Fine's desire to reach out to others went beyond the homeless. She also loved making connections with staff and students at Realms, and standing up for her fellow students in schoolwide discussions — something the high school encouraged, she said.

"The student voice at Realms is really, really valued, which I appreciate," Fine said. "We have pal of Realms High, said Fine had a significant presence at the school. He called her an ambassador for Realms, and noted she gave more tours to interested students and families than anyone else.

"In some way, she's provided more unofficial leadership for our school than many of the kids in our official leadership governance group," White said. "She sets the tone and builds a culture of student activism, student engagement, courage in speaking, all of that."

Fine will start studying full time at Central Oregon Community College in the fall, although she's already taking a few classes now, she said. Eventually, she plans to transfer to the Oregon College of Oriental Medicine in Portland, and earn her doctorate degree in traditional Chinese medicine.

Fine said she wants to be an acupuncturist because Chinese medicine has helped her with her frequent migraines.

"The only thing that's ever helped me is Chinese medicine. I really struggle through Western medicine," she said.

Patrons and staff searched in vain for the man's fingers, worried he'd left them behind.

"We didn't find any pieces on the floor, but that was probably because they were still in his pocket," Israel said.

The young man was later transferred to St. Charles Bend for surgery.

No citations were issued Sunday, but police are still investigating whether crimes occurred. The firearm involved was seized as evidence, and truck stop patrons and staff were interviewed as witnesses.

Webb expects to transfer a possible criminal case to the district attorney's office soon. More information will likely be released at that point.

Police believe a bullet traveled through the man's hand, then his leg, and into the woman's leg.

The man didn't scream but ran outside in shock, bleeding profusely, Israel said.

The man was able to secure a ride to the hospital before first responders arrived, Webb said.

"I don't know what was going through his head, but I know that he went pretty much directly from where it happened to the hospital," Webb said.

The woman remained at the scene and was treated by medics and sent by ambulance to the same hospital.
