Florence Pugh, left, and Scarlett Johansson perform in a scene from “Black Widow.”

Continued from previous page to his impressive resume with his directorial debut with this film that documents the 1969 Harlem Cultural Festival, aka “Black Woodstock.” With archival footage of the performances that were stuck in a basement for 50 years and recent interviews with musicians and historians, the nearly forgotten festival once again can see the light of day.

“Black Widow” (July 9) — Many of us Marvel fans have been waiting for this one for literally years, so to be this close to a release is thrilling. See this in a theater, it was meant for it. But if you can’t, it will be available as a Premier Access title ($29.99) on Disney+.

“Space Jam: A New Legacy” (July 16) — Millennials rejoice, it’s time to slam again! Was the 1996 Michael Jordan-led film good?

Probably not, but it’s hard to see through rose-colored nostalgia glasses sometimes. Will the sequel be any good? I don’t care, take my money already. The film will also stream for one month on HBO Max.

“Snake Eyes: G.I. Joe Origins” (July 23) — Henry Golding, the dreamboat from “Crazy Rich Asians,” picks up a katana and kicks everyone’s butt in the trailer for the upcoming origin story. Based on the G.I. Joe comic book character, Snake Eyes joins a ninja dynasty and learns to become a warrior but then loyalties are tested as his past is revealed (isn’t it always?).

“Jungle Cruise” (July 30) — Disney is at it again by turning a beloved ride at Disneyland and turning it into a full-length movie. Based on the recent trailer it looks fun, and there’s no denying that Dwayne “The Rock” Johnson and Emily Blunt aren’t well suited for the bantering-romp through the jungle.

“The Green Knight” (July 30) — Dev Patel takes on the Arthurian legend that looks epically amazing and beautifully shot.

“The Suicide Squad” (Aug. 6) — Part reboot, part sequel but this time the film is helmed by James Gunn who better knows the tones of this kind of team-up movie. Chockablock with stars who will probably die quick and bloody deaths, it’s also got John Cena as Peacemaker who’s excitement for the upcoming release is infectious. It will also stream on HBO Max for one month.

“Respect” (Aug. 13) — Jennifer Hudson takes on the Queen of Soul in the first big-screen biopic of Aretha Franklin’s life.

“The Beatles: Get Back” (Aug. 27) — Another music documentary worth checking out this summer is the one about one of the greatest bands of all time as they reach their end. What director Peter Jackson has done a little differently is taken unseen footage filmed during the recording of the “Let it Be” album and is able to paint a more complete picture of the bandmates and their true affinity and love for each other.

“Shang-Chi and the Legend of the Ten Rings” (Sept. 3) — It’s a double Marvel summer! This time, we get an entirely new character in a master martial artist Shang-Chi (Simu Liu) and, of course, he has to confront the shady organization of the Ten Rings and also his past.
