While the names of moons are old and vary from culture to culture, the English-speaking world seems to have agreed on using a mix of medieval European names and names from North American Indigenous peoples.

DEC. 18: COLD MOON

Aptly named, December is the month where things get cold in the Northern Hemisphere, or at least we associate it with the colder weather. It's also called the Long Night Moon as the nights are at their longest in December and the Moon Before Yule. Other names include Evergreen Moon (Comanche), Small Spirits Moon (Anishinaabe), Snow Moon (Cherokee), Moon of Respect (Hopi), Not Bad Weather (Kalapuya), Eccentric Moon (Shawnee) and Sun Has Traveled Home to Rest (Zuni).

JAN. 17, 2022: WOLF MOON

In the depths of winter, wolves would prowl hungrily outside of villages and try to score a meal. The name comes from both the Europeans and some tribes including the Sioux's Wolves Run Together moon that appear in January. Other names include the Moon after Yule, the Freezing Moon (Shoshone), Stay Inside Moon (Kalapuya), When the Snow Blows Like Spirits in the Wind (Arapaho) and the Year Moon (Comanche)

FEB. 16, 2022: SNOW MOON

Even though we in Central Oregon tend to see our big snows now in March, the heaviest snows for many in the Northern Hemisphere occur in February. For the Choctaw, the moon is given a darker moniker of Moon of Big Famine, as hunting was limited and any plants were still a long way from harvest. Other names include Out of Food (Kalapuya), When Trees Crack Because of Cold (Lakota), Moon of the Rabbit (Potawatomi) and Crow Moon (Shawnee)

MARCH 18, 2022: WORM MOON

With the final moon of the winter, the worms begin to appear on the trails and the newly thawed ground, showing life returning from the cold. Another origin for the name could also have come from the larvae that begin to emerge from the trees after the winter. Other names include Moose Hunter Moon (Abenaki), Snow Crust Moon (Anishinaabe), Cotton Ball Moon (Comanche) and Eagle Moon (Cree)

APRIL 16, 2022: PINK MOON

As spring begins to emerge, phlox usually begins to bloom along with other pinkish flowers and grasses. Other names include When They Set Indian Corn (Algonquin), Moon of Big Leaves (Apache), Ice Breaking in the River (Arapaho), Moon of Blackberry (Choctaw) and Budding Time (Mojave)

MAY 16, 2022: FLOWER MOON

This one is pretty self-explanatory. May is when the flowers really come into bloom in most places. This will also be a total lunar eclipse, which will last for 1 hour, 25 minutes, according to NASA. Other names include Food Gathering Moon (Haida), Moon When the Ponies Shed (Sioux), Hoeing-Corn Moon (Winnebago), Camas Blooming Time (Kalapuya) and Moon of Waiting (Hopi).
