SPORTS BRIEFING

MEN'S GOLF

English wins Travelers, beating Hickok — Harris English birdied the eighth hole of sudden death to win the Travelers Championship on Sunday, beating Kramer Hickok after both birdied the final hole of regulation to force the playoff. It matched the second-longest sudden-death playoff in PGA Tour history. English shot a 5-under 65 to finish the fourth round at 13 under, then made a 5-foot putt on the seventh trip down the 18th hole of the day. Hickok had missed a 36-foot birdie putt and finished the playoff with eight consecutive pars.

MLS looks into alleged racial abuse — Major League Soccer is investigating allegations of racial abuse directed at Portland Timbers midfielder Diego Chara. Timbers coach Giovanni Savarese said after Portland's 1-0 loss to Minnesota United on Friday night that a "discriminatory word" had been used by a Loons player toward Chara, who is Black and from Colombia. "MLS has zero tolerance for abusive and offensive language, and we take these allegations very seriously," the league said in a statement. Minnesota United released a statement saying the Loons player involved, who was not identified, denied making "any derogatory remarks."

TOUR DE FRANCE

Van der Poel honors grandfather — What his grandfather failed to do in 14 editions of the Tour de France, Mathieu van der Poel achieved at his first attempt. The Tour debutant pointed a finger toward the sky in memory of his grandfather, Raymond Poulidor, as he crossed the finish line of the second stage at cycling's biggest race on Sunday to snatch the coveted yellow jersey. "It's a shame he is not here, but what can I do," the 26-year-old Van der Poel said about Poulidor, while holding back tears after his maiden Tour stage win following a blazing attack. Poulidor, who died in November 2019, took part in 14 Tours from 1962-76, finishing in second place overall three times and third five times. The younger Van der Poel jumped out of the group of favorites in the 2-kilometer climb leading to Mur-de-Bretagne, where the finish was set. The Dutchman used his greater power with 700 meters left to drop all the main contenders in the long stretch of road. Defending champion Tadej Pogacar was next across the line.

Korda

"The past few days, the battle with Lizette, it's been a lot of fun. It's been stressful. I think it's had everything," Korda said. "But I just can't believe it. I'm still in shock." At 19-under 269, she tied the Women's PGA record to par last matched by Inbee Park at Westchester Country Club in 2015.

Korda won for the second straight week — her third LPGA title this year — and it was enough to become the first American at No. 1 in the women's world ranking since Stacy Lewis in 2014.

Jin Young Ko had held the No. 1 spot for nearly two years. Her only mistake came when it didn't matter.

Korda seized control with a 6-iron she caught heavy enough to worry it might not clear the pond on the par-5 12th and was relieved when it rolled out to 8 feet for eagle.

That turned into a three-shot swing when Salas — who spent the weekend hitting hybrids on holes that Korda had short irons — hit wedge over the green into a bunker and made bogey.

"That was my favorite wedge, too," Salas said. "The good thing is I was committed to that shot. This wind is pretty swirly. Maybe a little drop-kick, I don't know. Got a few extra yards out of it."

Korda's older sister, Jessica, was among the first to embrace her on the 18th green as the emotions began to emerge.

It was a big celebration for one of the top sporting families in the world. The Korda sisters each have six LPGA victories. Their younger brother, Sebastian, is at Wimbledon this week as the 50th-ranked player in men's tennis and has a chance to join them in Tokyo for the Olympics.

Their father is Petr Korda, who won the Australian Open in tennis in 1998.
