Elks game moved to 7:35 p.m. due to heat — Due to the heatwave that has brought record-high temperatures across the Northwest, the Bend Elks moved the start time for Wednesday's game against the Corvallis Knights at Vince Genna Stadium. Originally scheduled for 6:35 p.m., the game will be moved to 7:35 p.m., when the temperature is expected to drop into the low 90s, the Elks organization announced. Those who attend the game will be allowed to bring sealed water bottles and electrolyte drinks into the stadium. The new policy will last through Sunday. Tuesday night's game was also moved to 7:35 p.m. For more information, visit bendelks.com.

Skaggs' family sues Angels, 2 employees for negligence — The family of former Los Angeles Angels pitcher Tyler Skaggs filed lawsuits Tuesday in Texas and California charging the team and two former employees with negligence in his drug-related death two years ago. The lawsuits — filed by Skaggs' parents in Texas and his wife in California — name the Angels organization as well as former Los Angeles communications directors Tim Mead and Eric Kay as defendants. Skaggs, 27, was found dead in his suburban Dallas hotel room on July 1, 2019, before the start of what was supposed to be a four-game series against the Texas Rangers. Kay was indicted by a federal grand jury in October on drug charges for allegedly providing Skaggs with the drugs that caused his overdose death. Kay was charged with drug distribution and drug conspiracy in Skaggs' overdose death, according to the indictment in Fort Worth, Texas. The charges carry a maximum of a life sentence and 20 years in prison, respectively. His trial is set to begin Aug. 16.

PGA Tour to end COVID-19 testing after 50 official events — The PGA Tour began requiring COVID-19 tests more than a year ago when it returned to competition amid the pandemic. It will have overseen testing at 50 official PGA Tour events when the program ends next month. The final PGA Tour event for testing — not including the majors — will be the Barbasol Championship on July 15-18.

Cav is back! Cavendish posts 31st Tour de France stage win — In October last year, Mark Cavendish posted an insignificant 74th place at the Belgian classic Gent-Wevelgem. Depressed and dejected, the sprinter from the Isle of Man suggested in an emotional post-race interview it could well have been his final race. On Tuesday at the Tour de France, the tears of sadness made way for those of happiness after the "Manx Missile" posted a 31st stage win at cycling's biggest event. "Just being here is special enough. I didn't think I would ever get to come back to this race," said Cavendish, the greatest sprinter in the race's history.

Oilers' McDavid unanimous choice as NHL MVP — Edmonton Oilers captain Connor McDavid ran away in the voting to win his second Hart Trophy as NHL MVP on Tuesday. McDavid became just the second unanimous Hart selection — joining Wayne Gretzky in 1982 — in receiving all 100 first-place votes from members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association. McDavid doubled up on honors by also winning his third Ted Lindsay Award as the league's most outstanding player, which is voted on by players. Vegas' Marc-Andre Fleury won his first Vezina Trophy as the NHL's goalie of the year. New York Rangers' Adam Fox won the Jack Norris Trophy as the NHL's top defenseman, and Minnesota's Kirill Kaprizov won the Calder Memorial Trophy as rookie of the year.

Bend's Nate Koehler (2) dribbles down court during the first quarter against McNary at Bend High on Friday. McNary defeated Bend 59-45 in the final game of the season for the Lava Bears.

"It's been a vicious roller coaster that I can't seem to get off of," said Bend High girls basketball coach Allison Gardner moments after finding out her team's already delayed and shortened season would be even shorter and more delayed. It was a year of resilience, when high school athletes were told "no," to "hold tight," and to simply wait. And wait. And wait. "Kicking the can down the road," became a common phrase used among the high school sports circle as key start times came and went with little

"As a coach I always prided myself on being able to roll with the punches, deal with adversity and to take things as they came my way. I had no idea how little I knew about that until this year."

— Aaron Johnson, Bend High boys basketball coach

changes to what teams and athletes could and could not do. Once the green light was given, it was full-speed ahead — but with limited practices, overlapping seasons, non-traditional schedules and in most cases no postseason.

Still, most athletes adapted to the adversity. "Our kids came out and they played every game like it could be their last because they never knew when something could be taken away," said Mountain View football coach Brian Crum after concluding an undefeated season in early April.

And now, less than two months away from the start of yet another school year, high school sports are on the path to returning to normal.

Fall schedules are posted on the OSAA's website — with the regular amount of games, against the regular league opponents. "Our start dates and so forth ... it's a pretty typical calendar for us," Weber said. "We are planning on returning to normal this fall!"

"Our college athletes have not been treated fairly. They sacrifice everything for their universities ... their bodies, their relationships, their academics. Meanwhile, the NCAA and universities are making millions off their hard work ... from tickets, merchandise, and concessions, all the way to college enrollment. "We are giving our athletes back what is rightfully theirs: their name, their image, their likeness. This should have been done a long time ago. It should have come from the NCAA and our universities. This is just the beginning. We must keep working to make sure our college athletes are treated fairly." University and athletics leadership at the University of Oregon, Oregon State University, University of Portland and Portland State University all issued statements in support of SB 5 following its amending to removing a controversial provision that called for college athletes to receive royalty payments from school's merchandising deals. Efforts for federal NIL legislation, which was the preference of the NCAA and most all conference commissioners and athletic directors, stalled in Congress in recent weeks due to differences between the parties as to the scope of the bill, though a national measure could still be enacted. "It would be helpful if there was some guidance nationally that we all knew what the parameters were as opposed to 50 patchwork state laws, but we will be prepared for whatever state we're in from a rule development or federal legislation on July 1," Oregon athletic director Rob Mullens told The Oregonian earlier this month. "We all have to be prepared and we will be prepared."
