WOMEN'S NCAA TOURNAMENT | FINAL 4 PREVIEW

Overlooked Louisville seeks 1st title, as SC awaits in semis

BY DAVE CAMPBELL
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — This is Louisville's fourth trip to the national semifinals in 15 seasons under coach Jeff Walz, a feat that has ensured every four-year player in the program under his direction has had the opportunity to experience the Final Four.

Yet the Cardinals are the team in this year's quartet of powerhouses that has generally been the most overlooked, a reminder of the oligarchy still lingering in a sport seeing more parity every season.

No college coach, of course, would ever pass up an opening to play the underdog role. Walz recounted hearing on a talk show this week that the Connecticut-Stanford winner was bound to face South Carolina in the NCAA championship Sunday night, causing him to jokingly wonder if the host mistakenly figured the semifinals only featured three teams.

"We actually have four, and we're the fourth," Walz said.

Louisville, one of three No. 1 seeds in the 68-team field to make it to Minneapolis, plays No. 1 overall seed South Carolina in the first game at Target Center on Friday night.

"At least let's roll the balls out and let's see what happens," Walz said. "They might end up being true, but I'd give us a fighting shot at it."

The Cardinals (29-4) will present plenty of challenges for the Gamecocks (33-2), starting with guard Hailey Van Lith, as intense a player as there is in this tournament, and forward Emily Engstler, a disruptive force on defense who can put the ball in the basket, too.

"If they want to sleep, let them sleep. We'll come in and do us, and we're going to do us to the best of our ability," said Van Lith, who has hit the 20-point mark in all four tournament games.

South Carolina has also been to four Final Fours in 14 years under coach Dawn Staley, but the Gamecocks won the 2017 title. That's one reason for the prominence gap, however slight, between the two programs.

"I hear people say, 'What are you going to do to get over the hump?' What hump is there to get over, besides winning a national championship?" Walz said Thursday. "I know it would be wonderful, but we're not going to define the past 15 years on one game."

AP Player of the Year Aliyah Boston leading the way, but they're carrying ample motivation of their own after the way they lost last year to eventual champion Stanford in the semifinals.
