

What's Available NOW On hulu

“Family Law”

From Canada comes this dramedy that follows a group of flawed family members who reluctantly work together at their father's law firm in downtown Vancouver. Jewel Staite (“Firefly”), Victor Garber (“Legends of Tomorrow”), Genelle Williams (“Warehouse 13”) and Zach Smadu (“The Expanse”) head the cast.

“Movie: Drunk Stoned Brilliant Dead: The Story of the National Lampoon”

Douglas Tirola's 2015 documentary is a love letter to the iconoclastic and often outrageous National Lampoon magazine, including extensive and previously unseen archival material and illustrations from its pages. The film also includes new interviews with Chevy Chase, “Animal House” director John Landis, Kevin Bacon, Tim Matheson, Beverly D'Angelo, writer P.J. O'Rourke, Billy Bob Thornton, John Goodman and a host of others.

“Movie: Permanent”

Bullied at her small-town Virginia school after getting a perm her clueless parents got her at a beauty school, 13-year-old Aurelie (Kira McLean, “The Veil”) schemes to raise the money to get it corrected in this 1980s-set 2017 comedy from writer/director Colette Burson (“Hung”). Patricia Arquette and Rainn Wilson also star.

“Movie: Crush”

Forced to join her high school's track team, an aspiring artist uses it as an opportunity to pursue the girl she has a crush on — that is, until she starts falling for one of her teammates in this romantic comedy from director Sammi Cohen in her feature film directorial debut. Rowan Blanchard, Auli'i Cravalho, Isabella Ferreira and Tyler Alvarez head the cast. (ORIGINAL)

It has been quite the career for Henry Winkler.

Indeed, the 76-year-old Yale-trained actor has quietly put together an impressive body of work since he first rose to prominence as ‘50s greaser Arthur “The Fonz” Fonzarelli in the 1974-84 ABC sitcom “Happy Days.”

Over his more than 50 years in television, Winkler has amassed 100-plus TV credits, done another 38 movies, appeared in several stage productions and written numerous books for children and adults. He's also been nominated for eight Emmy Awards, winning once in 2018 for his role as acting teacher Gene Cousineau in the HBO comedy “Barry,” which returns for its third season Sunday, April 24.

In fact, Winkler himself at one time taught acting, experience he was able to use in creating the character.

“I have had the experience of five times of holding master classes,” Winkler explains, “and it is one of my favorite things. I'm not sure I know what I'm talking about but whatever I'm feeling about what the actors in front of me are doing, it is my pleasure to try and get them to taste something different than they came into the room with, just by pushing them a little bit. So it goes back and forth. I take Gene with me, and I bring Henry to Gene.”

Winkler brought Gene to the New York subway system in 2019, when he participated in a “Barry” ad campaign that consisted of a poster with the character's picture and a number to call for acting lessons.

“I thought it might have been the best campaign I've ever been part of,” Winkler, a native New Yorker, says, “and I did the voice for the phone number, so if you called the phone number you literally heard me talk to you. I was so proud, because I took that subway for the greater part of my life before I came to Hollywood. I was so thrilled to be part of that campaign.”

Full name: Henry Franklin Winkler

Birth date: Oct. 30, 1945

Birthplace: New York City

Alma mater: Studied theater at Emerson College (bachelor's degree) and Yale School of Drama (master's degree)

Family ties: He and wife Stacey have two sons and a daughter

TV credits include: “Another World,” “The Mary Tyler Moore Show,” “The Bob Newhart Show,” “Happy Days,” “Rhoda,” “Mork & Mindy,” “Laverne & Shitley,” “Joanie Loves Chachi,” “Sesame Street,” “It's Garry Shandling's Show,” “MacGyver,” “The Larry Sanders Show,” “The Practice,” “Third Watch,” “Clifford's Puppy Days” (voice), “Crossing Jordan,” “NUMB3RS,” “Parks and Recreation,” “Childrens Hospital,” “Royal Pains,” “Arrested Development”

celebrity scoop
BY GEORGE DICKIE