INTERSTATE 5

2 die in separate pileups in fog

BY SAVANNAH EADENS
The Oregonian

Police are still figuring out what exactly happened Wednesday on fog-shrouded Interstate 5 that caused dozens of cars and trucks to crash, killing two drivers in separate incidents 8 miles apart and closing off sections of the freeway's southbound lanes for much of the day.

Investigators are still "piecing everything together," said Capt. Stephanie Bigman, of the Oregon State Police. The Oregon Department of Transportation called the pileup of some 60 vehicles, including 20 semitrucks, "an extremely challenging situation."

Oregon State Police offered few details and provided no information on the first fatality, which happened at about 8 a.m. 14 miles north of Eugene.

Many drivers were going too fast, considering the foggy conditions, Bigman said. Drivers were temporarily rerouted to the northbound lanes.

Traffic that had backed up behind the morning's initial crash was beginning to clear, and cars were passing through the scene when an unknown obstruction, possibly a tire in the road, created a minor fender-bender-like collision outside Halsey, Bigman said.

Two people died in two separate multivehicle crashes on Interstate 5 north of Eugene on Wednesday. Oregon State Police said the crashes in the southbound lanes of the interstate involved about 60 vehicles including up to 20 semitrucks.

This led a Freightliner semitruck to pull to the right and stop in the slow lane. Another Freightliner truck crashed into it and caught on fire. The driver of the second freightliner, identified as Kirpal Singh, 63, of Yuba City, California, was killed, Oregon State Police said.

Two sedans rear-ended behind the semitruck crash, but the drivers were not injured. The crashes each spanned more than a mile and closed the southbound lanes 16 miles north of the Beltline Highway intersection. Six of the involved semis were leaking fluids, police said.

ODOT said southbound I-5 south of Albany at state Highway 34 didn't reopen until about 2:30 a.m.

LOCAL BRIEFING

Bend man killed in crash on Bend Parkway

A three-vehicle crash Wednesday night on the Bend Parkway killed a 37-year-old Bend resident.

After getting calls about a crash involving multiple vehicles, the Bend Police Department and Oregon State Police responded around 9:30 p.m. They found Cody Dupont, 37, of Bend was driving a 1995 Honda Civic around 75 mph south on the parkway when he struck another vehicle traveling south operated by a 17-year-old Bend resident, Bend Police said in a news release on Thursday.

Dupont lost control of his vehicle, crossed the median into the northbound lanes of the parkway near Reed Lane, and crashed into another vehicle driven by Gregory Canfield, 56, of Bend, police said.

Dupont was killed in the crash, and Canfield, who suffered minor injuries, was found to be impaired and was arrested on suspicion of being under the influence of a controlled substance. Canfield was taken to the Deschutes County jail. The 17-year-old driver was uninjured.

Fire damages two homes

nue early Thursday morning. There were no reported injuries.

According to Redmond Fire & Rescue, crews were dispatched about 4:30 a.m. to the blaze. When they arrived, firefighters found two structures on fire and flames spreading through nearby brush and junipers.

Crews were able to stop the fire spreading through the brush and trees and contain the fire to the two homes, according to the fire department.

As of 9:30 a.m. Thursday morning, crews remained on scene extinguishing hot spots.

Thick smoke from the Nakia Creek Fire clogs the air, as seen from the Camas Creek Watershed near Camas, Washington, on Wednesday. A haze of smoke from several wildfires covering parts of Oregon and western Washington is expected to clear before the week's end, but only after the region achieved a dubious distinction: Portland and Seattle and briefly topped a list of large cities with the worst air quality in the world.

Thick smoke in western Washington and Oregon to soon clear

Associated Press

A haze of smoke covering parts of Oregon and western Washington is expected to clear before the week's end, but only after the region reached a dubious distinction: Portland and Seattle briefly topped a list of large cities with the worst air quality in the world.

The smoke comes from several wildfires burning in Oregon and Washington, and several days without rain allowed it to linger and thicken. A new weather pattern was expected to hit the region Friday, according to a National Weather Service forecast, bringing multiple rounds of rain that will help scrub the air of pollutants.

On Thursday morning, Seattle was listed as the worst city in the world for air quality and pollution and Portland ranked third, according to IQAir, a company that gathers air quality information from around the world.
