WEDNESDAY APRIL 21 1897

JULIAN BYRD - - - - - Manager.

The contrast between the rushing of the tariff bill through the house and the inauguration of Czar Reed's do-nothing policy in that body is not a pleasant one for those who cling to the old idea that the house is a representative legislative body to contemplate.

Fred Grant acts as though it were adding insult to injury for Mr. McKinley to offer to make him anybody's assistant Secretary, but that is no indication that anything better will be offered him. His career certainly justified placing him in the assistant class.

It is not surprising that anxiety should be felt in some quarters to know how New York managed to grab two out of the four ambassadors.

Prosperity is just as slow in getting to most of the McKinley pie hunters as to the rest of the population.

Finding that the office seekers would not leave Washington, Mr.
McKinley ran away for a rest of several days.

W. J. Bryan said in Washington the other day. "I am more than ever impressed with the idea that the silver sentiment is steadily gaining instead of losing ground."

Somehow Mr. McKinley and Congress seem to be equally skittish of that monetary commission idea, which the executive committee of the Indianapolis convention of last winter has been trying to push to the front in Washington.

Ex-Senator Peffer might increase the circulation of his paper by hiring John J. Ingles to conduct his fighting department.

It is probably true that Spain is paying out as much money in the United States as she is in Cuba, and it isn't all going to the detectives who watch filibusters, either.

Mr. Bryan, who appeared before the Supreme Court as a counsel for the Nebraska State Board of Transportation, in an important case, did not owe his appearance in the case to his political prominence, as he was retained long before he became a Presidential candidate.

It is an ill wind etc. The small boat builders will probably enjoy a boom as a result of the Mississippi River floods, as no house in that section without a boat will hereafter be considered properly equipped.

Receiver Galloway has just compiled his report of the receipts of the Oregon City land office for the first quarter of 1897, showing the total to have been $2217.91. Fifty homestead entries were made, covering 6900.97 acres; 81 final homestead proofs, covering 11,496.87 acres; state school selections comprising 11,193.55, and wagon road selections of 32,967.57 acres, on which fees amounting to $1899.29 were paid.
