JULIAN BYRD — — — — — Manager.

Mr. Dingley doesn't think as much of that tariff bill since a thousand or so amendments were added by republican Senators, but he doesn't dare do much talking on the subject.

King George, of Greece, now knows that he should have stood pat on his bluff and let fighting alone.

Well, who is breaking the banks now? The democrats are not in control of any branch of the government, but banks are still failing.

Once more the money kings of Europe are calling for American gold, and getting it, too. Whether they will continue the call until they force McKinley to issue bonds is discretionary with them, as long as our present financial system is maintained.

Notice of tariff retaliation has already come from Canada, Germany and Japan, and there will be others. "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

By the way, what has become of these campaign orators who asserted so positively that no more gold would be exported if McKinley was elected?

The fact that Addicks has started a match factory not far from Dupont's powder mill may raise insurance rates in Delaware.

The man who eats and thrives on scrap iron is one of the few who isn't worrying about the failure of property to materialize.

Senator "Billy" Mason's assault upon the Senate rules seems to have been almost as barren of results as his daily charges upon the McKinley pie counter have been.

If we can believe all we read Gen. Horace Porter, by the grace of McKinley now Ambassador, was a much greater factor in helping Gen. Grant fight his Virginia campaign than the world had supposed him to be. True, the new evidence is furnished by Gen. Porter himself, and is not acquiesced in by some of the veterans, but many of the latter are dead.

It is now in order for the "philanthropists" to express their opinion of the "race oppression" involved in lynching of six negroes in Texas by negroes.

John E. Lathorp, city editor of the East Oregonian, and Postmaster Johnson, of Pendleton, came to blows recently in the Hotel Pendleton, Lathorp getting some the worst of it. The trouble arose over a news paper article.—Eagle.
