A Pittsburg woman has sued for divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty and alleges that her husband has been accustomed to throw silver dollars at her. A more frequent cause for divorce is the failure of the husband to throw enough dollars about the house.

Mrs. Charlotte Smith of Burns still makes the transportation for 100,000 women shall be furnished by the public in order to send them to the Klondike. If Charlotte will head the list herself and cut down her estimate 99,999, the matter probably can be arranged without difficulty.

Artificial rubber is being sought by Mr. Berthelot, the French chemist, who predicts that his product will be better and cheaper than the natural product of para.

A new industry has been started in Michigan. Blocks of sawdust with resin are made and sold for fuel, and it is said that for a quick, hot fire this has no equal.

At a reunion of the Smith family in Blair County, Pa., the attendance was 4,000, and this was only one-third of the number entitled to be present. But the meeting can hardly be called a frost.

An Alabama man has sued for $10,000 damages for libel, basing his claim on the wording of a tombstone inscription. This is carrying a grave subject too far; a majority of tombstone epitaphs are libelous, and everyone knows it.

A farmer came into a store the other day, in a near-by town, to sell a load of apples. He was offered 50c a box. And the drummer collapsed.

British soldiers who possess bicycles of their own are hereafter to receive traveling allowances of one penny per mile for distances actually and necessarily traveled.

A young woman in Worcester, Eng., died from the effects of eating wax candles to improve her complexion. Her method of letting her light shine injured her liver.

It is said that if the earth's atmosphere were suddenly increased in thickness to 700 miles the sun could not penetrate it and the earth would soon be wrapped in ice.

Some papers and persons have a habit of sneering at this or that proposition by saying, "O, it is only a populist scheme;" or "it is fathered only by Democrats;" or some other party or faction; as if that entirely settled the matter against said proposal or plan. This proves prejudice to have too large an influence in the minds of those who make such remarks. If a thing is just, right, and good, or partly so, it is none the less so because advocated or recommended by those with whom we may differ in politics generally. —Portland Tribune.

A Kansas widow recently published a card of thanks to all her friends "who assisted in the death of her husband," but she neglected to include the doctor.

Germany insists that she wants only justice from Hayti. But her ideas of what constitutes this commodity have somehow been strangely modified since the United States showed a disposition to take a hand in the row.

A crazy man died lately in Indiana, firmly maintaining until the last that he was God. Plenty of people are said to have acted as if they suffered from a similar delusion.

Some men, whose Thanksgiving dinner evidently disagreed with him, says that the spirit of Thanksgiving is a night-mare.

The New York Tribune says: Some Indians were lynched in North Dakota the other day, and now one of the surviving squaws sees the cause for the lynchings in the mind of the lynchers. "Even in lynchament, can grasp an idea when there appears to be none in it."

The Piedmont Virginian says: "The colored people in the neighborhood of Brandy Station had a revival at one of their churches that lasted about five weeks, and on the Thursday before they closed there were two sinners, Thomas Parker and Daniel Somers, converted. On Friday night they stole Richard Nalle's chickens, traded them on Saturday for clothes to be baptized in, were baptized Sunday and were arrested and jailed on Monday."
