THE MAINE DISASTER.

U. S. Battleship Blown Up in Havana Harbor—Thought to be the Work of Spain.

On Tuesday night, Feb. 15th, the U. S. Battleship, Maine, was blown to pieces in the Havana harbor. It has not been ascertained as yet whether it was caused from an explosion from her own magazines or a mine explosion from beneath. At any rate the vessel sank a few minutes after the disaster with every thing combustible burning until enveloped in water. Spanish boats were to the rescue in short order and all who survived the explosion were saved. There were 258 men killed including two officers. Divers will be sent down to find out whether the vessel's hull was staved in or out. The valuable machinery and guns that are not damaged will be raised, and if possible, the vessel conserved and great excitement prevailed in Washington, Havana and Madrid after the accident and statements of prominence reflect an opinion at present. To say that the apparent friendly relations existing between this government and Spain is strained to the utmost is putting it mildly. De Lome's insult followed by the running of one of our best war ships in a Spanish harbor, is, to say the least, very suspicious. Later advice gives the following: Washington, Feb. 18.—The feature of the day at the navy department was the large number of rumors of a warlike tendency that came to the attention of the officials as requiring attention and in every case contradiction. So formidable had they grown that at the close of office hours, Secretary Long was induced to make the following statement as the earlier manner of disposing at one time of all the strikes: "Really no information has been received since Captain Sigsbee's first dispatch, adding anything to our knowledge of the disaster. All we know is that the Maine blew up. There is abundant room for speculation of all sorts, but no conclusion can be arrived at until an examination has been made by the divers and more facts obtained."

Madrid, Feb. 18.—The newspapers are urging the government to adopt great precautions when the American divers arrive and not to allow them to descend alone and examine the Maine, "as divers sent by private persons might be able to report at variance with the actual facts and might even do something to the hull which would serve as a confirmation of their report."

Admiral Matrota refuses to allow the divers sent by American newspapers to make any investigation near the wreck. Spanish Cruiser Arrives. New York, Feb. 18.—The Spanish armored cruiser Vise ya is in New York waters. She dropped her big anchors five miles south of Sandy Hook lightship at 5:30 p. m. after a 13 days' voyage from the Canary Islands. When her officers and men learned the startling disaster to the American battleship Maine in Havana harbor and of the downfall of former Minister De Lome, they broke into a wild uproar of talk. For a couple of minutes all discipline on the great ship seemed to vanish to the winds. Men rushed to tell their comrades on the lower decks. The vessel will be escorted, tomorrow, to her permanent anchorage in the harbor. LATER.—The latest we have from the Maine is to the effect that it is now believed to be the work of the Spanish. It is thought the damage to large for anything but an extremely large torpedo, or mine. Orders have been received at the navy yards to prepare the Monitors, Puriton and Terror for service. Today Statesman says divers have begun work and it seems to be settled that the Maine's magazine did not blow up. Messrs. Ted and Bailey Hayes, accompanied by their families, were in Burns this week. A marriage license was issued by Clerk Kelley one day last week to Mr. Jack Craddock to wed Miss Mamie Wintermire. We are informed Rev. J. C. Templeton will go to Silves today and tie the knot. We extend congratulations. At the meeting of the populist central committee last Saturday the postal card vote on the question of fusing with the silver forces in the state and district stood more than two to one in favor of union. The question of putting a fusion ticket in the field in this county was left undecided. The middle-of-the-road press does not seem to have much influence with the reform forces. Ben Craddock, who left here last spring with several car loads of horses for the eastern market, returned last Wednesday evening, having disposed of his horses in southern Kansas and Oklahoma. We did not learn the price but he is well satisfied. He was accompanied home by Peter Deffenbach, a cousin of our old time friends, Daniel Deffenbach and sons, who reside in the southern part of this county.

An Important Decision.

Supt. W. C. Byrd has received a circular letter from State Supt. Irwin in regard to women voting in school elections, and refers to the recent decision in the supreme court. The following is part of the letter: The matter of women voting has, during the last year, been going through the courts, and reached a decision in the supreme court in the form of an opinion of the full court, handed down by Wainwright, J. February 14, 1898, in the case of Laura A. Harris vs. Sherwood Burr, et al. of the school district of the city of Eugene, Lane county, Oregon. Said Laura A. Harris, offered to vote at a school meeting held in Eugene, March, 1897, and said vote was refused, whereupon said Laura A. Harris began action against said judges of the election. The circuit court of Lane county sustained the right of tax paying women to vote, and the case was appealed to the supreme court, which court affirmed the decision of the court below. It is therefore established that in all school districts, women who have property in their own name upon which they personally pay tax, are over twenty-one years of age and have resided in the district thirty days immediately preceding said meeting are entitled to vote. All who can vote in districts of population of over one thousand can vote in all other districts, but it is also provided that in the lesser districts persons who are parents or children of school age, even though they have no taxable property, can vote. This, according to the opinion given by the attorney general, applies to both father and mother.
