It should be silver plated.
First Gambler: "Say, old sport, didn't I see you shaking hands with the Rev. Mr. Smith yesterday? How did that happen?"
Second Gambler: "Why, you see, I haven't had any luck at poker lately, so I thought it might be comforting to hold a good hand once more."
He: While I was in Africa last year I shot a tiger.
She: Is that so? What were you aiming at?
May: "You wouldn't think from her looks that she is one of the newly rich and has forced her way into society?"
Old Boy: No; but you might be sure of it by the looks of every other woman in the room."—Ex.
"I think it's absurd to say kissing is dangerous," gushed Mrs. Lilytop. "What possible disease could be spread by the simple act?"
"Marriage, madam," grunted Grumpy.—Pick-Me-Up.
Weary: "Dat guy what wraic 'Steal on, Oh, Time, was pretty right." Raggles: "How's dat?"
Weary: "I waz jest thinking dat to-morrow I'll have plenty of 'time' and can 'steal on' ter a square meal."
Horton: I'd have you to know, sir, that my ancestors were men of the highest respectability.
Nankin: I have no doubt of it; but even if they weren't it would be mean to blame them for what happened years after they were dead.—Ex.
Mistress: Get dinner today on the gasoline stove, Bridget.
Bridget: "Plaze mum, I did try, but th' stove went out."
Mistress: "Try agin, then."
Bridget: "Yes mum, but it's not come back yet. It went out 'trough th' roof."—N. Y. Weekly.
Smoking a cigarette the other day in the north, I heard a story which, so far as I know, is new. A proud old lady swept indignantly up to the door of a railway carriage at York Station. A school boy was leaning half way out the compartment, reflectively making a cigarette, and, after the fashion of the English schoolboy, not caring for anybody. "Is this a smoking compartment?" asked the dame with scathing voice. "No, madam," replied the boy politely, raising his cap, "if you want a smoking compartment you will find one a little lower down."
