The annual reports of the business of the year and every department all carry the marks of having been carefully edited by one man, and for one purpose.

If John Sherman was in office things would appear different to him. After holding office for fifty years the old man can't understand how the plucky country can run at all without him in office.

It should not be forgotten by democrats that a squabble over the democratic leadership in the next House would be far more pleasing to the republicans than to the rank and file of the democratic party.

According to the creed of the reformed Presbyterian church, as exemplified by Presbytery which recently met at Newburgh, N. Y., it is ungodly for its members to vote or to in any way participate in the management of the government. Suppose all the people should join that church?
