A Narrow Escape.

The town of Burns had another narrow escape from fire one night last week, the Burns hotel being the place it started. We understand a drunken man had gone to bed in the room and left the lamp burning or in some manner turned it over. The noise of the fire was heard by other lodgers and in that way discovered. Some of the bed clothes and the wall of the room were in flames while the man was in happy dreams. The jail would have made a better resting place for him than the hotel. We are going to have a terrible fire one of these times and should take every precaution possible.
