Only a Smile

Only a smile was given me On the crowded street one day, But it pierced the gloom of my saddened heart, Like a sunbeam's ray. The shadow of doubt hung o'er me, And the burden of pain I bore, And the voice of hope I could not hear, Though I listened o'er and o'er. But there came a rift in the crowd about, And a face I knew passed by, And the smile I caught was brighter to me Than the blue of the summer sky; For it gave me back the sunshine, And it scattered each somber thought, And my heart rejoiced in the kindly warmth Which that kindly smile had wrought.

Only a smile from a kindly face On that busy street that day; Forgotten as soon as given, perhaps, As the donor went her way; But straight to my heart it went speeding To glid the clouds that were there, And I found of sunshine and life's blue skies I also might take my share. —George McDonald.

Causing Horse Meat

Four carloads of canyves arrived at the stockyards last week from the Umatilla reservation, says the Oregonian, numbering 120 animals in all, for the Linton cannery. The Umatilla Indians, like those of the Yakima and Warm Springs, prefer the $2.50 a head to the worthless little horses, which eat the bunchgrass from the more valuable stock. Horses coming from the east for the cannery are unloaded at the Portland stockyards and driven to Linton, as the Northern Pacific charge $10 for each car running over its tracks, and the horse-slaughtering company can have the animals driven over the county road at a much smaller expense. The horse-killing season is expected to close down after some more have been put in.

TELL-TALES OF CHARACTER

Fill Your Heart With the Love of God.

In a recent lawsuit, in one of our Southern states, the question of ownership of a large estate was dependent on the sanity of a certain Squire C. who had executed a deed of gift of it to a stranger. A committee of physicians visited him on his plantation to decide whether he was of sound mind, and consequently competent to dispose of the property.

"We spent the day with him," said one of them in his testimony, "conversing with him on politics, philosophy and religion, and found him a man of sound and even brilliant intellect.

"We managed to bring forward a problem in mathematics which he instantly solved. His manner towards us and his family was gentle, reasonable and courteous. We had decided in favor of his sanity, but when we took our leave, he rose to accompany us to the gate, and taking a tall, scarlet plume stuck it in his hat and strutted before us. The red feather told the tale."

Wherever there is a flaw in the mind or character of a human being there is always a red feather to tell the tale. We may try to hide our vanity, our malice, our dishonest principles as we will, and cheat our friends and even our family into a belief in our moral superiority, but some day the mask drops off for a moment, and they know us as we are.

"In novels," wrote a German physician lately, "we often read of heroic men and women who suffer for years from secret terrible diseases, which they successfully conceal. I can but say they live in a world where there are no physicians. Diseases are indexed in the features, the movements, the skin, the breathing, by a thousand signs legible as print to a skilled eye."

Moral disease asserts itself just as certainly, swathe and cover it with hypocrisy as we may. "I lived for years," wrote Hunt "neighbor and friend of mine, and believed him to be one of the kindest and most amiable of men, until one day I found him torturing a cat in his barn with shouts of delight. I knew the man for the first time. He was a brute, with the cunning to conceal his brutality." The young reader may ask: "What am I to do, then, with these defects of character—the vanity, or the ill temper, or the gross appetites which I have inherited? They are ugly and indecent in the eyes of the world. Ought I not to keep them out of sight?" You cannot any more than you can hide a poisonous plant whose roots strike deep into the soil of your garden. Cut it off, trample it down as you may, some day, when the sun and air are favorable, it will start to light. The only cure is to tear it up by the roots.

Fill your empty heart with the love of God. Malice and conceit and iniquity will not grow in that soil.—The Household.

The Companion for 1900.

The regular issue of THE YOUTH'S COMPANION for October 19th is the annual Announcement Number, and contains a full illustrated Prospectus of the contributors and contributions already engaged for 1900. The list of writers embraces many of America's most famous soldiers and sailors, while statesmen, scholars, travelers and gifted story-writers of both sides of the Atlantic will vie in the enrichment of THE COMPANION'S pages during the new year. New subscribers who send their subscriptions now will receive free this year's November and December issue from the time of subscription.

The Household.

THE TIMES-HERALD is in receipt of a few sample copies of "The Household," a handsome 32 page, illustrated monthly, full of interesting reading matter and valuable information for old folk, middle-aged people, boys and girls, as a general by pages will at once convince the reader. Each issue contains well-written...

Illustrations for children, popular home entertainment, etiquette in social life, reasonable suggestions on what to wear, how to decorate the home, lessons in silk embroidery, Battenberg lace in new stitches, new patterns for knitting and crocheting, lessons from the Boston cooking school, practical recipes for home cooking, window gardening and flower culture. No home should be without The Household. It has no superior of its class. Its stories are pure and elevating in tone. THE TIMES-HERALD will send The Household free to every subscriber who pays us one or more years in advance for the paper. Mothers, wives, fathers, husbands, you cannot invest $2 that will bring better returns. Call or send in your orders for THE TIMES-HERALD and get The Household free.

Fact and Fancy.

Elder—Why didn't your church join the others in praying for rain? Deacon—We had just opened a gospel tent.—Judge.

Miss Alice Serber of New York, the first woman granted the privilege of practicing in the United States district court, is a Russian by birth, and did not know English until her twelfth year. She, however, speaks without a trace of accent.

He—This war in South Africa will make diamonds dearer. She—I suppose so; but any girl who really loves a man would be willing to wear a ring of pearls and opals until the trouble is over.—Chicago Record.

The 15-year old son of commandant Cronje of the Transvaal army fights at his father's side. The only son of Myntner Wolmarans, and the sons of State Secretary Reitz, Judge Kock, ex-Judge Esselen and several sons of members of the Cape parliament are fighting on the Boer side.

The virtues of a keen business man are often negative rather than positive. It is said that a great broker once told his son that only two things were necessary to make a great financier. "And what are those, papa?" the son asked. "Honesty and sagacity." "But what do you consider the mark of honesty to be?" "Always keep your word." "And the mark of sagacity?" "Never give your word."

General Corbin sums up the military forces in the service of the United States as follows: Regular army, 64,508; volunteers, 34,574; total, 99,160. The regular establishment consists of 10 regiments of cavalry, seven of artillery and 25 of infantry. The volunteer establishment consists of one regiment of cavalry, 24 of infantry and a Puerto Rican battalion.
