Burns, Oregon, April, 1901.

Those who know me are familiar with the condition my eyes have been in for the past year. I could hardly make out large letters on a sign board across the street. I was on the point of going to Portland for treatment when Dr. Clark visited Burns. I consulted him and began his treatment. Five days after he began treating my eyes I shot a snipe, sighting my rifle with my right eye. Today I can read fine print with either eye, while they are growing stronger each day. MATT RIGGS.

Baby bonnets and hoods, silk and embroidered—cutest things in Burns—also potatoes $1.25 per sack, turnips, rutabagas 75 cents per sack—Mrs. May Overton, East Burns near fair grounds.

I had about given up the idea that anything could be done for my eyes, for in spite of all the doctoring I could do they grew worse. I was told that nothing could be done for them as a film was growing over both, while I suffered more or less pain. I began treating with Dr. Clark soon after his appearance in Burns. The film has entirely disappeared from my left eye and nearly from my right. No more pain and no more water running from them. I can read fine print with either, while they are constantly growing stronger. I make this statement for the benefit of any who are having trouble with their eyes. CHRIS LACKMAN.

WASH FABRICS

This department fairly whispers of sunshine and summery days. How could it be other wise?

The new lines are so extensive and vast in variety, rare in beauty, fashionable in effect—worthy in quality and unsurpassed from the standpoint of economy.
