S. W. McMurphy and wife, who spent last winter with their daughter in the Willamette valley, returned home the first of last month. Mac informs us that he fell upon a log several days before he left the valley which nearly broke his back, and from which he has not yet fully recovered. They will return to that section again in a short time.

Geo. Tucker came in from Happy valley the first of the week and swore out a warrant before Justice Jameson, charging D. H. Smyth with firing several shots at him from a haystack. Special Constable Sizemore went over and brought Mr. Smyth in and subpoenaed several witnesses. The preliminary was held to-day, but we had not learned the result up to the time of going to press.

A large sagebrush fire in the southeastern part of town Tuesday evening caused the fire ladders quite a little exercise. Some one thought a building was burning and turned in the alarm. There was a lively chase by the two engines for three blocks, and just as they were getting ready for action with the hand engine they discovered that some one had been clearing sagebrush and set it on fire. There may have been a few "cuss words," but the run didn't hurt the boys any.
