The insistence of the Oregonian that there is not republican disaffection in Oregon in the present campaign is proof of itself that it does exist. If there were none the Oregonian would not have cause to repeat over and over again its assertion. In short the Portland paper is whistling to keep its own courage up and to encourage republicans in all parts of the state to smile again, with the puckering out of their lips.

The fact of the matter is, there is republican disaffection, and it all the dissatisfied republicans and a goodly portion of the stay-at-home vote in 1900, should vote the democratic state ticket in June, the republican state ticket would be defeated and badly so. However, there is plenty of time for the republicans to get over their "disappointment" and come back into the fold, where, of course, they will be made welcome.

There are some too dissatisfied to return, so outspoken that they openly declare they will vote the democratic ticket, which happens to be an excellent one this year, on a platform that is as good or better than that of the republicans.

If the democrats are successful, the people can be assured of faithful service in state affairs. From George Chamberlain, candidate for governor, to the tail of the ticket, the democratic nominees are fit men, able and successful in their private affairs and business callings and representative to the best that is in the democratic party in Oregon, possessed of a better spirit than has been usual in former campaigns, more enthusiastic and more hopeful of accomplishing something of real value to the state and to the people.

The spirit of itself is encouraging to those who believe in democratic teachings and government of the people for the people, and by the people, which, to some extent, at least, is not any longer desired by a large number of those who are closely identified with and are prominent in the republican party.—East Oregonian.

In looking over the list of candidates nominated by the various counties of Oregon for the legislature at the election to be held in that state on Monday, June 2, 1902, it is easily seen that the democrats are pursuing the right course in nominating their very best men for state senators and representatives. In nearly every county in the state, strong men have been nominated and the majority will be heard from Salem next winter. As an example of what has been done we can refer to our neighboring counties of Baker, Malheur and Harney, where William Smith of Baker has been nominated for the senate and E. H. Test of Ontario for representative. No better men can be found in the state, or any other state, for that matter, and their election is certain, for they are as popular as they are deserving.

And this reminds us that too often democratic nominating convention overlook the fact that the very best men of our party should be prevailed upon to stand for the legislature. Too often are these places given to disappointed seekers for other positions, without regard to their qualifications as legislators, which requires more ability than any county office possibly can. The Oregon democrats have struck the right note and we hope to see it taken up by the democrats of Idaho.—Dose Capital News.

The Open-Air Number of the Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia, which will be out April 24, will be one of the most notable special numbers of the year. In the opening article, The Serene Duck Hunter, ex-President Cleveland writes about his favorite sport with genial humor and laugh-compelling frankness. William Marconi, the inventor of the most successful system of wireless telegraphy, tells, over his own signature, of the experiments which led up to the marvelous results that he has achieved. In Tales of the Diamond President James A. Hart, of the Chicago, comes some good stories of famous ball players games and enthusiasts. This is the first of two papers.

Every sportsman will read with pleasure Arthur E. McFarlane's spirited story, entitled The Old Feller's Fishin'. Among the other strong features in this number is a Letter from the Self-Made Merchant to His Son, the second part of Paul Latzke's intensely interesting paper on James J. Hill's School for Railroad Presidents, a new installment of Conjuror's House, and the regular biweekly Washington letter by a Congressman's Wife.

Among the shorter contributions are Mr. F. A. Warner's practical paper on Farming as a business, Mr. Forrest Crissey's timely sketch of Governor Van Sant, of Minnesota, an exquisite poem by Mr. Bliss Carman, and the usual popular department.

Hon. E. H. Test, democratic candidate for joint representative of Malheur and Harney counties, returned from Portland Saturday, where he had been as a delegate to the state convention. Upon his alighting from the train at the depot he was met by a large crowd of his fellow townsmen and a brass band. Mr. Test was borne on the shoulders of his friends and admirers to a buggy and then drawn by them through the streets to the First National Bank building, preceded by the band. In a short speech he thanked his friends for their loyalty, stating he had been successful so far and would use every honorable means to be elected. There were many ladies in the crowd, who presented their favorite candidate with bouquets of flowers.—Ontario Argus.

Pendleton East Oregonian: A sign of the times comes out of Chicago. Its import cannot be questioned. It is too plain to be misleading. In the recent election in that city 150,000 voters indicated their approval of municipal ownership of street railways and of gas and electric lighting plants, while only a paltry 25,000 votes were recorded in the negative.

The Dalles Times-Mountaineer: It is very true Mr. Furnish has some commendable qualities. He is a successful business man, and a pleasant man to meet; but the less laid about his "firm adherence to principle" the better it is for him.

The republicans of Harney county do not seem to be very enthusiastic in their support of State Senator Williamson in his race for congress. At their county convention a set of resolutions was passed in which Mr. Williamson's name was not mentioned—Portland Journal.

If Congressman Tongue, whose home is over in Webley, where it rains thirteen months in the year, would come over to Boise and see what irrigation has done for the Boise valley, he would withdraw his opposition to the irrigation bill.—Capital News.

To hell with a man who wouldn't change his principles once in a while.—Harvey Scott on Furnish.
