THE REPUBLICANS WERE MUCH DISAPPOINTED.

The Speaking in This County a Severe "Frost" From the Start.

The republican rally at Floral Hall last Saturday evening was attended by a large crowd, but there was practically no enthusiasm. The speakers tried in vain to wake up the cold-blooded crowd, and once in a while succeeded in drawing a faint response from the bored listeners. With the exception of, perhaps, half a dozen republicans, they all express disappointment.

The real thing and the report sent to the Oregonian by "some d— fool," as Fitzgerald expressed it, were considerable of a contrast. Instead of seventy-five people, headed by the band, to meet the speakers at the outskirts of town, there were not to exceed that many on Main street when Hon. J. N. Williamson and Judge Webster arrived at the hotel. The Burns Band was there to meet them and give them a welcome. There were no cheers that anyone heard.

A nice crowd had gathered at the hall in the evening, and, when the nominee for congress came in, some lonely fellow started to stamp his feet, but the crowd did not respond as it should have done and as was due Mr. Williamson, so the lonely fellow subsided.

Fred J. Palmer, nominee for joint representative, was the first speaker and was followed by C. H. Dodd, of Portland. After him Mr. Williamson was introduced by Chairman Hanley and spoke only a few minutes. Mr. Williamson did not make a favorable impression, even among his own party followers. They had expected an eloquent address and were disappointed and so expressed themselves. The gentleman started to discuss the Philippine question, but before finishing the explanation he stopped and left his ideas unelucidated and in confusion.

He announced that he was opposed to land leasing at this time, and after tossing a few complimentary remarks to the people and town of Burns, he took his seat. The voters would have relished a more pronounced declaration by him on the leasing question.

Judge Webster then came forward and made an eloquent plea to his party to stay with their young colt—Furnish. While the Judge held the attention of the people well, he did not gain a vote for his man. He flailed the democratic platform, and from his remarks the inference was almost conclusive that he had never read the document itself—only the comment of the Oregonian on the Philippine plank.

The party took the Burns Band with them to Lawen, Harney and Drewsey. The local candidates accompanied Mr. Williamson, and he was heard to remark at Harney, "You know, Judge, we are not drawing crowds, but bringing our audience with us from Burns!"

After Chairman Hanley found the people so unresponsive, he asked the members of the band to blow their horns at the right time. The boys accommodated him and made things noisy when an opportunity offered.

COMMITTED SUICIDE.

A telephone message from Harney yesterday morning stated that J. R. Johnson, of Drewsey, had committed suicide Wednesday evening by shooting himself with a rifle. We were unable to get the particulars at the time the tragic news was first received, but it seems his body was found in the hills near Drewsey Thursday. On Wednesday he appeared jovial and good natured toward his friends, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon went home and his wife told him she had kept his dinner hot for him. When she started to put it on the table he told her he wanted no dinner, and that he was going to kill himself. He had been suffering from rheumatism in one of his legs, and said he had unmistakable symptoms of paralysis and would not die that kind of a death. He also stated that he would not be buried under the ground, and had a place picked out for the past five years in which to place himself. About 6 o'clock he went to Daly & Robbins' store, bought some cartridges, and, taking his gun, crossed the river and went down the east bank. His wife did not think his talk meant anything serious, but, after hearing the reports of two shots, she went and told his brother Dick. The latter and several friends went out to look for him. They came back at dark, having failed to discover him. Even then his brother thought nothing serious had happened, supposing he had gone to some neighbor's house. The next morning the search was resumed and the body found.

John Johnson was a well-known resident of that section, where he lived for years. He was married to Etta Draper last month, and none of his relatives or friends suspected that his mind was unbalanced or that he contemplated self-destruction. He was well liked by all his acquaintances. Deceased had conducted a blacksmith shop at Drewsey for many years. He leaves a wife, two brothers, Ace and Dick, at Drewsey, and one sister, Mrs. G. W. Cleverly, of Burns, to mourn his untimely end. The bereaved relatives have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends.

He says there is only one way of entering it, and that would be by removing a large rock which walls up the entrance. On approaching the mouth one can hear the terrific roar of what is thought to be winds, or, perhaps, some mighty subterranean water fall. It is well worth visiting. Mr. Dutcher says, being such a natural wonder.
