JULIAN BYRD — Manager

The friends of the irrigation law, now before congress are now jubilant. The bill has passed the house by a large majority; its provisions, as is well known, meet the warm approbation of the president, who has long been outspoken in advocacy of systematic, intelligent reclamation of the country's arid areas. This measure is held to embody these ideas, and is regarded by many as only second in importance to the homestead law—as, in fact, "a new homestead law," made applicable to arid lands. Simply stated, it provides that the government shall create new rivers through the building of reservoirs and main-line canals, and so regulate the flow of streams already in existence that their waters will be available for irrigation during a season of drought. Only bona fide settlers will be entitled to secure land contiguous to, or dependent upon this newly created water supply; settlers who are in truth as well as in declaration of intent, homeseekers and homebuilders. These are not only to reside upon and cultivate the land thus secured, but are to return to the government in due process of time, by a system of deferred payments, the entire cost of creating the water supply which rendered the lands arable.

It is recalled in this connection that it was under a republican administration after ten years of bitter controversy, that the homestead act became a law. The bill introduced by the veteran Representative from Pennsylvania, Galusha Grow, was passed after stormy debate, and received the signature of Abraham Lincoln. Friends of the "new homestead law," so-called, and these comprise the population of the states of the great plateau, and their name is legion, declared that the speeches made in congress in opposition to the irrigation bill bear a striking similarity to those made in opposition to the homestead law, prior to the enactment in 1862. They see in the proposed irrigation law, merely a modification of the homestead act to suit conditions in the arid portions of the public lands yet to be devised to settlers, and which cannot be made available without such assistance as this land is intended to give.

The voters of the First Congressional district, who by a substantial majority have extended his term of membership in the house of representatives, feel a just and loyal pride in the position of Hon. T. H. Tongue upon this important measure. Though not reckoned among the arid states, Oregon has a very considerable area of arid and semi-arid lands, the reclamation of which will add greatly to its wealth producing capacity. A law which will put up the bars against corporation ownership of irrigable lands, and open the way for settlers to come in and occupy them as home-builders, founders of schools, patrons of churches and factors in community life, cannot fail to prove a vast and increasing benefit to the state and the nation. This it is declared the "new homestead law" will accomplish as the years go on, and in this interest its enactment is urged.—Oregonian.

At Denver a new political party has just been founded and named. It is the "American Labor Union" and the corner stone is said to be socialism with the expectation that all who have socialistic tendencies will join the party. Organizers will go forth into the benighted east to carry the light of truth and convince the erring of their faults. If it was possible for this organization to corral all American voters who believe in some sort of socialism or who acknowledge freely that in some matters socialism is good, the party might prove formidable—but pulled down over his eyes.

there are almost as many kinds of socialists as there are degrees of socialism.

Some pessimist has suggested that England may send William Waldorf Astor as Ambassador to this country.—Atlanta Journal.

If Congressman Grosvenor really wants to see where the tariff is hunting he might take a look into one of those formerly full dinner pails.—Atlanta Constitution.

An Illinois Justice has decided that a man's wife is entitled to the money paid for the eggs laid by their hens. Oh, wise Judge! Let the old man and the old rooster divide their profits; but the lady is surely entitled to the hen and the emoluments derived therefrom.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Kilauea, Hawaii's volcano, not to be outdone by volcanoes in other sections of the Western world, is casting forth "redounding smoke and ruddy flame," not to mention ashes, gas and sulphurous fumes. An outbreak is generally predicted, and strange to say, people are preparing to go thither to witness it, instead of remaining at a safe distance, duly thankful.—Oregonian.

It is a source of congratulation to the world over that the devastating guerrilla warfare in the Transvaal is ended. There ought to be enough humanity and Christianity saved out of the situation to further an amity hereafter between the parties and carry promptly forward the reconstruction of a most valuable domain of the earth. The British can afford to be both just and generous to the Boers and the latter may find in British amity and co-operation the way into a larger prosperity and equally effective independence as those they sacrificed in defense of their republic—Atlanta Constitution.

Fame's Pathway.

President Roosevelt shaves himself every day.

President Palma may soon discover that he has a congress on his hands.

Mrs Hay is busily engaged in fixing up a code of etiquette for official Washington.

They do not pretend that anybody will play horse over in Ohio with Senator Mark Hanna.

W. F. Sheehan is now fighting Tamany's wigwam. There's trouble all around.

Dr Edward Everett Hale endorses the Lord's Prayer in the most unqualified manner.

Mr Croker says he regrets Mr Nixon's retirement, and possibly he does—in his own peculiar way.

Signs of the Hat.

The man whose hat fits him exactly, and is set square and straight on his head, is nearly always an orderly, deliberate man, regular in his habits, but very often commonplace as regards mental attainments.

Men of large mental powers, thinkers and philosophers affect hats a trifle too large for them. They are men of large ideal, and their big hats will often be found in conjunction with loose, easy fitting clothes, for in this as in other matters, the body reflects the mind.

It is pretty safe to distrust the man who wears his hat at the back of his head and he who habitually goes about with it tilted to one side. The first is of a candid, easy-going type, but apt to be flighty; the latter, with a disposition for sport or frolic, is at the same time often frivolous and conceited. Neither of them however will be a coxcomb, like the man whose hat is too small for him, nor "deep" and crafty like the wearer of a hat which is always pulled down over his eyes.

The colored comic section is a genuine laugh-maker. The funny cartoons are by the best artists. The humorous stories are high class, by authors of national reputation.

Sheet music, a high-class, popular song, is furnished free every Sunday in the Republic.

Gentlemen—Please entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you

About two years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing.

I underwent a treatment for deafness, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians among others, the most eminent ear specialists, and still no improvement.

After I had used a few drops according to your directions, the ringing in my right ear has been entirely restored.

Very truly yours,
