As the campaign draws to a close and election only two days off all the candidates and their friends are active and working like beavers for success.

The Times-Herald has nothing sensational to spring at this late date for election purposes. It does not think it necessary to recount the good qualities of the democratic nominees.

Hon. Stephen A. Lowell, the eloquent and popular attorney of Pendleton, who did some good work for Gov Chamberlain two years ago, spoke to a small audience here Tuesday afternoon.

In another column will be found a synopsis of the remarks of Rev. A. J. Irwin delivered last Sunday at the Presbyterian church on local option.

Hon. T. J. Cleaton addressed the people of this city Saturday evening on the political issues from a republican standpoint.

The democrats have not a big campaign fund to carry them through a campaign with loud blaring trumpets and gusto.

It Was Misleading.

A representative of the Times-Herald was present at the special meeting of the city council last Monday evening which had been called for the purpose of meeting W. W. Johnson and Paul Locher to discuss matters regarding accusations made against them.

Although the citations read that they should show cause why their liquor licenses should not be revoked for selling liquor to habitual drunkards and keeping disorderly houses— instead of selling liquor to Indians, as published in these columns last week—it appears it had not been the intention of the council to take any action upon the matter at that time but to talk it over with the accused.

Some of the councilmen expressed themselves on the matter and individuals stated that they were satisfied Indians had secured liquor from the saloons, but possibly not to the knowledge of the proprietors and asked the men to be more careful and keep the Indians away from the back of their business houses.

The council do not desire to work a hardship on any one's business, but want to stop the drunken Indian nuisance and further to stop complaints coming to them in regard to such traffic.
