Terms Applied to Money.

We may think there is a great deal of slang in English, as we commonly use it in this country, but in at least one respect the colloquial tongue of England surpasses the wealth of terms we possess in this regard, and that is the slang relating to money. The American uses astonishingly few slang words in speaking of pieces of money—perhaps because he has a greater respect for it. A five-cent piece is usually referred to as a nickel, but this is practically the only slang term applied to any of our money in general use. A dime is officially a dime, and so is a quarter.

But turn to the English appellations for their money, and hardly a bit of it is referred to under its authorized and official designation. A shilling is seldom called such in London; they call it a "bob" and a "quid," which means a piece of tobacco in this country, is what they term a pound. Six pence they call a "tanner," fourpence a "joey" and a penny more often than not is unknown to the street gamins save as a "mag." A cabman will not tell you a ride will cost five shillings, but that it will require a "bull" to pay for it, and a half crown is "half a bull." These are prevailing expressions for the pieces of money widely handled, but proper terms for higher amounts are kicked aside and colloquial terms substituted for them.

At a race track if a better says he has ventured a "pony" on the probable outcome of a race, he does not mean that as it would appear to us, but simply that he has wagered 25 pounds on the result. Where money is handled in large amounts it is not an infrequent thing to hear one say of another that he has a "monkey" of money, meaning that the individual referred to is the proud possessor of 500 pounds. So you see in comparison with this plethora of riches our lone "nickel" is a poor crop of monetary slang, indeed.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

There is a new song going the rounds of the press and it runs as follows: "We don't want to buy at your place. We don't want to trade there any more you'll be sorry when you see us going to some other store. You can't sell us any stale goods, we have opened wide our eyes; we don't want to trade at your store, because you do not advertise"—Ex.

"Webfoot's" feet are cracking and the moss is sprouting on the sagebrush's back. Conditions have changed and the Willamette valley has a drought while eastern Oregon—the "Oregon Desert"—is soaked with frequent rains, says an exchange.

We long for the biscuits mother baked and fortunes would be laid if we could have but back again the dough that uncle made.

Stock Notes.

The prime requisites in fattening sheep rapidly are plenty of grains and a variety of fodder.

If you want your animal to grow whether sheep, horse, cow, steer or goat, you must keep it in good flesh and thriving.

It is muscle rather than fat that is needed in young and growing animals. The food, therefore, should be selected with this end in view.

Kindness conquers all living things, including a "breedy" cow, the kicking horse and all animals inclined to be unruly. It takes patience and good temper, invaluable qualities not always possessed by those entrusted with the charge of other living things. By treating colts kindly they can be prevented from becoming wild and tricky, as the horse is naturally tractable.—American Farmer.

WANTED—Agents, Hustlers, Salesmen, Clerks and everybody who wants to enjoy a good hearty laugh to send 50c for "Tips to Agents." Worth $50 to any person who sells goods for a living. If not satisfactory your money back. Circular for stamp. The Dr. White Electric Comb Co., Decatur, Ill.

Up-to-date job printing at reasonable prices.

Weak Hearts

are caused by indigestion. If you eat a little too much, or if you are subject to attacks of indigestion, the stomach expands—swells and puffs up against the heart. This crowds the heart and shortens the breath. Rapid heart beats and heart disease is the final result. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat, takes the strain off the heart, cures indigestion, dyspepsia, sour stomach and contributes nourishment, strength and health to every organ of the body. Sold by Burns' Druggists.
