HOW TO OBTAIN OLD AGE.

For sudden strong effort or severe trial, eat meat; for long continued effort, for endurance, eat cereals; after exhausting mental labor, eat yolk of eggs; after exhausted physical labor, drink infused tea; for pure brain stimulant, drink coffee; for paleness, eat lean meat and spinach; to make grey brain matter, eat eggs, beans, and oats; for sound sleep eat onions and garlic.

By following the above precepts laid down to the National Promotion of Health club by Dr. J. B. S. King here today, you will live to be 100 years old. At any rate, the doctor says so, says a Chicago special of recent date.

"The first 33 years of man's life is for growth," he declared. "The breast bone, which at the 33d year is composed of three bones, then consolidate into one, ending the growth period. The next 33 years is for work. The remaining period is for the enjoyment of the fruits of labor.

"Many persons who get stout at their 40th year think they are in fine shape. It is a mistaken idea. Stoutness at 40 is a sign of old age as much as gray hair. When it is noticed the diet should be cut down one third. The ideal old age is to be lean, spare and active. Old age, however, loves fat, while youth detests it.

"Oats for children and Indian corn for adults is almost perfect food. Meat is only food for severe effort. Too much meat, however, causes bad temper. The nearest approach to a perfect brain stimulant is coffee.

It is unjust to tax industry and pay premium on slothfulness.

Every man or corporation which holds a valuable lot or franchise for speculative purposes, and depends on the industry of others to increase the value of his property is an idler in the community and should be taxed as high as the busy industrial bee who fills his sphere with activity and creates business for others.

Idle lots in the heart of the business district and idle franchises held for speculative purposes should be taxed until the owners would be forced to utilize them from sheer self-protection. The progress of a city should not be held back by two or three selfish idlers.—East Oregonian.

The cattle outlook is gradually opening up better than it did last year, according to reports, and the prospects indicate that before the end of the season growers will be paid what is considered by all a very satisfactory price for their animals. The majority of the two-year-old steers was sold last year for not over $19 per head, while cattle men are now refusing $22 per head for their steers. Should this be the prevailing price for two-year-olds in the fall, three year-olds will command a price of $28 to $30 per head.—Huntington Herald.

Woolless Sheep Imported.

Some woolless sheep have been newly brought to this country, says the Washington Post. They are fawn colored, somewhat resembling Jersey cattle in hue, and quite small, not exceeding 100 pounds in weight. Some sheep weigh over 400 pounds.

These animals are of a very peculiar breed, which is known nowhere except in Barbadoes. It was from these islands that the specimens imported by the government were obtained. The general belief is that the variety was originally brought to Barbadoes from Africa, but nobody knows with certainty. Though lacking wool, they have very superior meat, it is said.

The imported specimens have been placed on the Arlington farm conducted by the department of agriculture, across the Potomac from the city of Washington. An effort will be made to find out what the sheep are good for, and whether their meat is sufficiently superior to ordinary mutton to make it worth while to introduce the stock for breeding in the United States.

EASTERN OREGON GREAT FIELD FOR IRRIGATION

Acting for the Department of Agriculture Prof. Fortier Makes Study of the Eastern Oregon Section.

Prof. Samuel Fortier, who has charge of the irrigation and drainage investigations in the Pacific states, acting under the directions of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, was in Portland the first of this week on his way to Berkeley, Cal., where he makes his headquarters. Prof. Fortier had been investigating conditions in Eastern Oregon as regards irrigation.

The investigation of Prof. Fortier of the climate and soil conditions of Eastern Oregon regarding irrigation are the first scientific researches of this nature that have ever been attempted by the government in this state. It is the result of a request made by Governor Chamberlain to Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, that the irrigation conditions of Oregon be investigated by the government.

The purpose of Prof. Fortier's visit to this state was to prepare and outline the work to be done by Prof. A. B. Stover, of the University of California, who has been assigned to Oregon for this coming summer. Mr. Stover is professor of irrigation at the University. He will spend the entire summer making trips through the arid sections of this state and studying the different conditions. He will also conduct experiments. In the fall he will go to Washington where he will compile a report of his observations and experiments.

If the report of Prof. Stover is favorable it is very probable that the Government will decide to locate a permanent station of investigation in Oregon as it has done in other states. If such is the case the legislation will be asked to appropriate several thousand dollars to aid in the work. The Government agrees to furnish an amount equal to that appropriated by the legislature. This arrangement has been made by the department of Agriculture with several of the Western States.

"I am surprised that Eastern Oregon is not more developed," said Prof. Fortier to the Oregonian. "It is almost astonishing," he continued, "that a greater progress in irrigation has not been made in this state. I think the possibilities offered are wonderful. I had no idea until I made this trip, of their extent. You have plenty of water, the very richest of soil and the climatic conditions could hardly be improved upon.

"I have ordered shipped from Portland a large galvanized iron tank, about two feet in diameter, which will be used at Bend to determine the rate and amount of evaporation. There will also be seven or eight additional tanks in which will be grown sugar beets. Dirt will be placed in the tanks and beets planted. During the summer the plants will be watered in different proportions. Some of the plants will receive hardly any water and others will be flooded nearly all the time. In this way we can find out the amount of water that should be used in that particular vicinity. When the beets have reached their full growth they will be analyzed to ascertain the amount of nutriment they contain and as to their purity. The largest vegetables are not always the best."
