The First National Bank of Burns, Oregon

Why a National Bank is the Best

REASON 8: A National Bank is required by the United States Government to add to its surplus account, each year, from its earnings. This is for the security of the depositors, and insures the patrons of a National Bank an ever increasing protection.

The United States Government therefore provides three strong, substantial safeguards for the protection of the Depositors of a National Bank. (1) By holding the stockholders liable for double the amount of their stock. (2) By requiring the Capital Stock to be a reality, paid in Cash. (3) By requiring that its Surplus Fund be increased annually from its earnings.
