Married—At the Anderson hotel in this city last Tuesday afternoon, J. D. Stewart and Miss Emily Siskel, Rev. A. B. Minkler performing the ceremony. This young couple had quite a strenuous time in their love affairs, but in spite of all opposition the romantic climax came to a happy end for them. It was not the stern parent that figured in this romance, but a brother-in-law of the bride. He insisted that the young lady was not 18 years of age, but she says she is. Regardless of this, however, so long as she had no legal guardian in this state the clerk issued the license upon the affidavit of responsible people that swore the young lady was over 16 years of age. The young people are now at the Fred Denstedt home where Mr. Stewart is teaching, later they will go to Mr. Stewart's homestead near Dog Mountain where they will make their home. Mr. Stewart is a graduate of the Ashland normal school and a former school mate of the writer and also Deputy District Attorney Leonard. He is a man of good reputation and is highly spoken of as an educator. The Times-Herald extends hearty congratulations and wishes Mr. and Mrs. Stewart a life of prosperity and happiness.

J. C. Welcome, the pioneer harness and saddle maker of this city, has just received letters of patent for a new automatic lock springless snaphook. It is a very simple contrivance but it seems no one ever thought of it until it is the first of the kind ever patented in the United States. It has many good features among them being the simplest and most reliable for the "snaphook" to come into so long as there is any pressure whatever upon the hook. No doubt it will be almost universally used by harness and saddle makers as soon as it is placed on the market and bids fair to make a fortune for J. C.
