A BANK'S SAFETY

is not measured by the showy building in which it may be housed, nor by its elaborate furnishings or handsome fixtures...

The Pacific Banker, the leading financial journal of the Northwest, makes the following pointed observations in a recent editorial...

"In the present period of unprecedented business activity, the creation of a liberal surplus is certainly the part of wisdom. The surplus of a bank is not only its strength, but in one sense it is the only thing it does not owe..."

CONSERVATISM. Our policy of conservatism has been strictly adhered to throughout our entire history.
SURPLUS. Our policy of creating a large surplus has been strictly adhered to, our surplus now being equal to sixty per cent of our capital stock...

Absolute safety for our depositors is our first consideration. All other considerations are secondary.
