STOCK RAISING CONDITIONS.

ing demand, owing to the tremendous growth of the Nation and the expanding foreign market. The small rancher, with the herd of less than 100 cattle will winter feed his stock with alfalfa. He will constantly improve his stock until one average steer will out weigh two of the old "long horned." His hay fed cattle will require little corn feeding to put in prime condition for market.

Inasmuch as discussions relating to "dry" towns and good towns have occupied considerable space in the different papers of the state recently, the following from the Portland Journal is of interest.

A queer phase of public spirit is manifest at Corvallis. According to the local papers of that town the commercial body and prominent citizens of that town are engaged in the unusual errand of trying to provide enough houses for people to live in. Increase of population has outgrown the increase in dwelling houses, with the result that a public movement has been inaugurated to supply the deficiency. The commercial body is holding public meetings, and a committee of private citizens is at work in the effort to solve the dilemma. A part of the plan is to personally solicit men or means to build dwellings for rental purposes, and the success has been such that a strong movement has set in, with a promise that the emergency will be fully met. The estimate of a committee of the Commercial club is that 50 to 75 houses must be thus provided in order to meet the shortage, and the present movement, it is asserted, will provide that number of buildings not otherwise provided for. Of 100 buildings now in progress of construction, but 25 of those vacated as a result of their construction will be available for rental purposes.

The town added two years ago 13 per cent to its quota of residences, 82 per cent last year, and since January 1 this year, 100 buildings have either been completed or are now in progress of construction. Property in the residence section is declared to have doubled in value within the past two or three years.

An interesting feature of the situation is that Corvallis and Benton county was one of the first in going dry under the local option law. Whether the fact aided in the present great growth is not stated, but evidently the growth came in spite of dry conditions. A probable large, if not a chief factor in the steady growth, is that four years ago the city installed a system of mountain water, municipally owned, in which the water supply is piped 15 miles from a mountain stream far up the slopes of Mary's Peak, giving the town one of the best water-supplies in the country. Altogether the situation is interesting at Corvallis, on account of the present activity of the Commercial club and prominent men of that city.—Ex.
