The Pavilla Comedy Company again played to large audiences on Wednesday and Thursday nights. To say the company is good, falls far short of doing them justice. They are by far and away the finest company that has ever visited Lakeview. They can get the money any place. Each is an artist in his or her line. Mr. Pavilla is an especially clever comedian; he is funny without overdoing it, without turning comedy into horse play. He was obliged to repeat "The Higher Life" on Thursday and Romeo and Juliet at Five" on both evenings, much against his will. But, as he said, he wanted to please the people, for he expected to come again, and therefore he submitted to the request of his patrons.

When "Huckleberry Finn" crawled under the tent to witness the circus he said that circus could get all his trade; that he didn't mind spending money on such a circus, but he didn't believe in wasting his money on it. We feel the same way. For all we attended under complimentary tickets, we admit that we'd spend our money on the Pavilla Company.

They can come again with full assurance of a large audience. Lakeview Herald, September 10.
