Formal acceptance of the Deschutes route into central Oregon as proposed by J. P. O'Brien, general manager of the O. R. & N., has been made by Mr. Harriman.

Mr. Cotton, who announced at the chamber of commerce meeting last week that he had been unsuccessfully striving for some time to get the maps of the Deschutes line approved by the secretary of the interior in Washington, D. C., will now know that as soon as the maps are approved, work on the line can be begun.

Up to yesterday the Harriman officials in Oregon have been working on a paper railway for Central Oregon. Three routes—the Deschutes, the Corvallis &

BURNS THE FUTURE SPOKANE.

A lengthy article in the last issue of the Blue Mt. Eagle gives a graphic description of the country and experiences of one coming into the great Harney country by the way of Austin.

Hours before Burns is reached great Harney valley stretches out to view and looking over the level intervening space between the stage and its destination it seems that a short time will bring the journey to an end.

Burns is the future Spokane of Oregon. She is the capital city of an empire and her potential resources are as great as some of the lesser empires of the world.

Eastern, and the Columbia southern extension have been under discussion, and while Mr. O'Brien favored the Deschutes and sent it to Harriman with his recommendation of acceptance, there was no certainty which, if any, of the lines would be built.

Although Mr. Cotton spoke last week as though the acceptance of the maps was all that was holding back the construction of the line, it had not actually been determined that the line would be constructed at all.

Now the Oregon officials have the assurance that the Deschutes line can be built as soon as they fix up their right of way troubles.

"We are willing to pay a reasonable market price for the land we need," said Mr. O'Brien this morning, "but we are not willing to be robbed. If necessary we will resort to condemnation proceedings, although we do not like to do this because it means further delay."

"I consider it may take a year and a half to build the line from its junction with the main line of the O. R. & N. at the mouth of the Deschutes river to Redmond, Crook county. The estimated cost is $4,773,000 and the distance 130 miles."

Whether the knowledge that if they do get their right of way they can go ahead with the work of building the road will make any difference with the work of the legal department in securing recognition of the Deschutes Railway company's maps can only be conjectured.

It is the opinion of Portland business men, however, that the announcement made by Mr. O'Brien this morning should not be allowed in any way to affect the action of the state legislature on the constitutional amendment allowing the state to build or aid in the building of railroads and the passage of the highway commission bill, which have been proposed to safeguard the interests of the state in the future.

This paper, while not informed officially, does not believe that Mr. Harriman intends to abandon Central Oregon, nor does it believe that the Telegram is doing right in belittling the wizard's apparent dilatoriness in beginning to grade.

We do not believe Mr. Harriman intends to build up the Deschutes, either, and never have thought so, either, for 110 miles of track costs something to build and operate, and tonnage from north of Agency Plains would never bring in more than three-six-bits annually.

Mr. Harriman has given us his definite promise, some thing he had never given before, to build into Central Oregon, and somehow, in spite of his delay, we think he will make good.

When he does, what is more natural than that he should select a route that will yield a substantial tonnage in wheat and timber from the very first year it is operated? Extension of the C. & E. offers this advantage over all other routes.—Prineville Review.

Not Enough Money in the U. S. To do a Strictly Cash Business.

There are over twenty thousand banks in the United States. In these banks there is on deposit eleven dollars for every single dollar of real money—gold, silver and paper.

Business is carried on by the aid of the banks as could be done in no other way. Ninety per cent. of the business is done without handling a single dollar of real money, but with checks, drafts, notes and other forms of credit.

A man deposits $100 to open a check account. He may issue any number of checks to total that $100, to any number of persons. Suppose one man receives his check for $25, he brings that check to the bank and deposits the amount to his credit. He too may issue a check to another party for that $25. In not one transaction does any party handle or see a dollar of real money.

The bank has made this system possible. This bank renders a service to the people that is convenient to business and safe for all parties. Our methods are the choice of approved and accurate tests taken from banking experience.

Our service will be a distinct advantage to your business, just as it is to our present customers.
