

PORTLAND A LIVESTOCK CENTER

Hogs from Nebraska, right under the nose of the Omaha packing house, are being sent to the Portland market already. This is a straw showing that this is going to be, is already, becoming one of the four great livestock markets in the country, and incomparably the greatest one on the Pacific coast.

This incident ought to prompt Oregon farmers to raise more and better hogs. We are eating Nebraska, Illinois, Kansas and Iowa hogs. They are being sent here not only dead but alive, to be sold in the Portland market.

Cannot Oregon farmers get busy and produce hogs that will compete in this now great and central market with those from the middle west, sent by rail 2000 miles? This seems worth thinking about by our increasingly progressive farmers.

We have now, here, in Portland a great market. Big, enterprising capitalists, recognizing the position of this city, have established or are establishing here an immense livestock market and the people of Oregon ought to appreciate it.—Journal

THE POWER OF WATER.

Those who look into the future with prophetic eyes predict that an age of water-power is dawning. They point wisely towards the great water-power developments already completed or in course of construction all over the world, from the rivers of Maine to the canyons of California, from Alaska to Argentina and from the Kashmir Valley in India to the outlet of Victoria Nyanza in Africa. And they back up their arguments with the statement that coal will be exhausted early in the next century and that mineral oil and natural gas will vanish with the coal.

Amid all this prognosticating and arguing arises a host of questions about this water-power which is to keep us from freezing in the next century, to turn the wheels of our industry, to prepare the food and to run our vehicles.

Every stream of running water from the trout brook sporting through the farm meadows to the largest rivers, is capable of producing more or less power. A hundred years ago when steam was still in its infancy, water power was quite extensively developed in this country but the steam engine, with cheap wood and coal fuel, quickly reached the practical stage and the old "overshot" and "undershot" water-wheels were abandoned. Up to a few years ago it was not practical to develop most water power because this power had to be utilized on the spot and very naturally the very best water falls were located in the wilderness, scores of miles away from the seaports, the railroads and the cities which needed it. But the invention of the electric transformer changed all this and made it possible to transmit this energy for hundreds of miles without serious loss.—Selected.

BONDS FOR INTERSTATE BRIDGE.

A press dispatch from Ontario says: At the special election held in this city yesterday for the purpose of bonding the city in the sum of $10,000 to aid in building an interstate bridge across Snake river one mile east of town the bonds were authorized by an overwhelming majority, there being only four votes against the proposition and there was only six dissenting votes in authorizing the city to construct the bridge, out of a total of 124.

The state of Oregon has appropriated $10,000 and Malheur county the same amount, which makes a total of $20,000 that has been appropriated for the construction of this bridge. The contract has already been awarded and work will commence as soon as the spring high waters have subsided and the bridge will be completed and ready for travel early next fall. The bridge will open up a highway from Boise through central Oregon, and is one of the first steps in the Oregon-Idaho good roads movement which will end in building a grand thoroughfare across the two states. A graded and graveled pike will at once be built from Ontario to the bridge site.
