serenaded Grandma Haskell last Sunday evening, it being her 86th birthday. Grandma is one of the highly respected pioneer women of this section and has been "Grandma" to so many of us for many years. She is of a happy disposition, very entertaining and has a large circle of friends who wish her many more birthdays.

Oleo Margarine, where art thou? If I have despised thee, it was because I loved another whom now I know to be as false as eggs. Butter, butter, false and fickle butter. In the hour of my turkey ye have left me but-terless. When you were worth but forty cents you courted me, but when men smiled upon you at ninety cents you left me alone with lard. Avant, and quit my sight for I return to my first love, Oleo Margarine. Go and go with eggs, and may the chickens and the cows run together until men may rise up in mighty voice and proclaim Oleo Margarine, queen and the high priestess of bread.
