Loud howls against the Southern Pacific and wagon-road companies have assailed the stars. These several monopolies have been called foes of progress and greedy enemies of the public interest. Yet their grip is no worse "strangle-hold" on the country than that of Pinchotism.

"Boosters" tell of the vast tracts of land in Western Oregon and Washington that are waiting for settlement and use; but, when they start in to find the land. they discover the Government refusing to admit settlers into the immense area of the unoccupied public domain. This public land, which from earliest days of the West, has been open to the makers of homes and which the laws ordain shall still be available to homesteaders, is "Pinchotized" by the Forestry Department, and the Land Department of the Government. The laws allow homestead entries on reserve land that is more prayed for in their complaint, that is:valuable for agriculture than for timber or minerals. But Pinchot claims in or to the East Half of North officials have determination of east Quarter of Sec. (5), Township (22) the matter in their own hands South Range (35), E. W. Yet if the Pinchot titled action on or before the 26th day of March, 1910, and if you fail so to answer the people will never be allowed for want thereof, the plaintiff will take to make homes on the land.

The point of all which is that because nearly all public land in August 1908 at the rate of 4 per cent per the western part of these two annum and the costs and disbursements states is timbered, no longer may of the action and for an order of sale of settlers make homesteads upon it.
