To educate the younger generation to the importance of forest protection and also enlist its aid in bringing the subject before the parents, a striking illustrated leaflet on the forest fire evil is being placed in the hands of almost every school child on the Pacific coast by the Western Forestry & Conservation Association.

Probably no single piece of printed matter has ever had equal circulation in the west, for arrangements are already made for the distribution of 350,000 in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana. The project has the endorsement of the state authorities, who are co-operating in its distribution before the spring school term closes. On one cover the leaflet has a colored picture of a settler's home being destroyed by flames, on the other a forest scene where fire has not occured. The text consists of questions and answers concerning need and methods of saving life and property from forest fire destruction.
