Fake advertising, even in the papers of the home, in the end will bring failure.

"Primarily, a concern to last in the advertising field must tell the truth. The goods must be of the value as represented. No man can succeed in the establishment of a business upon a fake foundation. Quality and square treatment are the sound watchwords of a sound business. I would rather have an ad in the paper that went to the homes, no matter how small, than the entire contents of a paper which circulated here and there and lived by false representation. A newspaper to secure a foundation must tell the truth, be accurate and be clean in the treatment of the affairs which it pretends to report. Pick out the clean paper to do your advertising. Never select the mushy kind, for they will do you no good. Advertise in the paper that is read at home, is liked for the comfort it brings to the home and the truthfullness and the care with which it prepares its reading matter. You surely will get results."
