

MEM I HAVE SKETCHED.

That evening and the day following I made pictures of the great Speaker, and, much to my embarrassment, Mr. Ralph insisted upon showing them to him. Some weeks later Mr. Reed sent word by Ralph that, if I could spare them, he would like to have the original drawings, many of which I sent him.

Walking with him one day from the House over to the Senate, in the big rotunda under the dome of the Capitol where many people piloted by official guides are usually to be found listening to the strange echoes of the place, a tall, thin woman approached us very rapidly and paused a few feet away from us.

Then stepping directly in front of Mr. Reed, she inquired, "Is this Mr. Thomas B. Reed of Maine?" Bowing politely in his peculiar manner, he replied in his nasal drawl: "Yes, madam, it is."

She continued: "Mr. Reed, I recognized you instantly from the comic pictures of you." He turned his rolling head towards me, giving a most pathetic and painful sigh. Then letting his head roll in the direction of the woman, he said: "Indeed, madam, I should think that was absolutely impossible."

Mr. Reed's wit and humor and sarcasm were, of course, known from one continent to another. How so funny a man could make a serious speech has always been a mystery to me, yet to suppose that he had no serious moments would be ridiculous.

His big head, no doubt, if studied by the phrenologist, revealed the characteristics of the "Czar."

I never remember looking at Mr. Reed without an inclination to laugh. Not, however, with any feeling of disrespect toward the great man. He simply appealed to my sense of the humorous so strongly that I couldn't be serious in his presence.
