Of course we are blessed with a rich soil that apparently will not wear out, yet the application of fertilizer we know will benefit our crops. Then why not use it instead of letting it accumulate and waste. A farm exchange says:

Farm manure always has been and probably always will be the most important and most abundant material for soil improvement. It is a necessary product on every farm and on stock farms a product which accumulates in very large amounts. If not used NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION. for soil improvements it becomes a worthless nuisance about the stables, whether in the city or in the country. A conservative estimate places the annul production of farm manure in the United States at two billion tons, The actual agricultural value of fresh farm manure containing both the liquid and solid excrements is $2 a ton, if the value is measured in terms of plant food or by the actual increase in crop yields produced by the use of the manure on long cultivated soils. The unnecessary waste and loss of farm manure which occurs in the United States each year is you are hereby required to appear and equal in value to ten times the answer the complaint filed against you value of all commercial fertilizers used in this country.
