Summer Pasture Seems Now To Be Solved

A Mr. Chance who with Mr. Kimball recently bought the Lone Pine ranch in Crook County, gives the following advice about providing summer pasture for stock. His theory sounds thoroughly feasible and would doubtless work out advantageously if properly tested...

"I want to keep stock," said Mr. Chance, and I cannot do it without pasture. That is what the matter with so many farms in the country. They have no pasture for stock.

"Now, I am going to make a pasture that will keep 1400 head of stock on the new place. This I can do by sowing two hundred acres to rye.

"No, I'll not clean it up at all, but just sow the seed broadcast, over the rough land, sagebrush and all. Then I will go over the ground with a light cultivator and the thing is done. Its no guess work, either, with me. I have tried it for years and I know just what I'm talking about. That's how they come to have wild oats in California. At first it was a joke but just see what it has done for that state. They could not get along without it. Rye, such as I have just described, will work wonders in this country. And furthermore, it will only be necessary to reseed the land once in four years.
