Two Indians died recently in Drewsey under rather suspicious circumstances. It is the impression of some that they were poisoned as they had been getting whiskey more or less and some that it possible they were given some substitute. The authorities have asked local people over there to make an investigation but so far nothing has been done according to a telephone conversation with the marshal yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Terrill. The doctor had been called away and no one was there to make an examination that would throw any light on their death.

The marshal added that one of the Indians was in bad shape from tuberculosis and likely there would be nothing found to indicate poisoning. The Indians were Bill Paddy and Harrison Villiar. The former was a bad one who got drunk just as often as he could get liquor.
