

A MILE WITH ME.
Oh, you will walk a mile with me
Along life's merry way?
A comrade, blithe and full of glee,
Who dares to laugh out loud and free
And let his frolic fancy play,
Like a happy child, through the flowers gay
That fill the field and fringe the way
Where he walks a mile with me.
And who will walk a mile with me
Along life's weary way?
A friend whose heart has eyes to see
And stars shine out o'er the darkening lea
And the quiet rest at the end
of the day
A friend who knows and dares to say
The grave, sweet words that cheer the way
Where he walks a mile with me.
With such a comrade, such a friend,
I fain would walk till journey's end
Through summer sunshine, winter rain.
And then? Farewell—we shall meet again!
—Henry van Dyke.

WEALTH A HANDICAP.
One of the greatest handicaps that some young men have in the outset of their career is the possession of an income which will relieve them of the necessity of independently earning their own livelihood. This removes a great incentive for endeavor and is a decided disadvantage. For that reason I have always had a considerable sympathy for the sons of rich men. They are seriously handicapped in life unless they are young men of exceptionally high character and imbued with lofty aspirations. — John Hays Hammond.

MAIMONIDES' TEACHINGS.
Fear the Lord, but love him also, for fear only restrains a man from sin, while love stimulates him to good.
The perfection of the body is a necessary antecedent to the perfection of the soul, for health is the key that unlocks the inner chamber.
Measure your words, for the more you say the more your errors. Ask for explanations of what you do not understand, but let it be done at a fitting moment and in fitting language.
Keep firmly to your word. Let not a legal contract or witness be more binding than your verbal promise even privately made.
Eat not excessively or ravenously. From a man's behavior at a public meal you can discern his character.
The total abstinence from wine is good, but I will not lay this on you as an injunction. Yet break wine's power with water and drink it for nourishment, not for mere enjoyment.
Dress as well as your means will allow, but spend on food less than you can afford.
Honor your wives, for they are your honor. Withhold not discipline from them and let them not rule over you.

THE COMPANION.
Life's a forest where we play
Hide and seek from day to day.
Childlike, here we lie in wait
To pursue a game with Fate.
Faring feely on the race,
We're no thought upon her face.
She doth blind us ere we aware
Whether she be fool or fair.
But, whatever else she be,
Count on this, her loyalty.
Though you wander wild and wide,
Still she trudges on beside.
And beyond the forest's end
Fate will still your soul attend.
—New York Sun.

PRICE OF PEACE.
Christians have not stood and ought not to stand for peace at any price. They have recognized and they ought to recognize that there are worse things than war, bad as war is. It is quite possible to pay too high a price for peace. Our fathers would have paid too high a price if in 1776 they had bartered liberty for peace. The generation of the civil war would have paid too high a price if for the sake of peace they had allowed the country to be rent in twain and a great slave empire to be founded, extending from the Ohio river to the gulf of Mexico and perhaps including Mexico and Central America.—Dr. Lyman Abbott.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.
If it must be so I am entirely content to have both the men and women vote.
Mark me, as soon as the majority of the women want the vote they will get it.
I am willing to let the women do all the voting and let the men tell them how to do it.
Is there any suffragette in the world who would not give up her principles for a nice man?
From the beginning of the world there existed in the human mind a belief in the unity of man and woman. When they married they became one. They were one in flesh and one in spirit. This idea of unity is still deep seated.
As soon as every woman has a man the women get to be very peevish.
The trouble is that there are only a few women apparently who want to vote.—W. J. Gaynor, Mayor of New York.

WOMANKIND.
Coquetry is the desire to please without the want of love—Rochebrun.
Before marriage woman is a queen, after marriage a subject.—Anonymous.
A coquette is one that is never to be persuaded out of the passion she has to please nor out of a good opinion of her own beauty.—Joseph Addison.
The vows that woman makes her friend are only fit to be written on air or on the swiftly running stream.—Catus Valerius Catus.
Women dress less to be clothed than to be adorned. When alone before their mirrors they think more of men than of themselves.—Rochebrun.
We measure the inconsistency of women when we are the victims. We find it charming when we are the objects.—Louis Claude Joseph Desmoulin.

POLITICAL EDUCATION.
It is a source of the utmost satisfaction to me to have the privilege and the opportunity to attempt to implant in the minds of such an undergraduate body at the formative stage of their characters and at a most influential time in their education the principles and sound principles of popular government, a proper appreciation of the inestimable heritage that we have received from our ancestors, the federal constitution and the necessity for using sanity and discriminating common sense in the selection of remedies for political evils and defects in our system with a view to retaining the numerous benefits of what we have inherited and making progress not by tearing down what has been proved by hard experience to be most useful and to be the great secret of our political success, but by building upon this as a foundation.—William H. Taft, Kent Professor at Yale.

SABBATH MORNING.
With silent awe I hail the sacred morn
That slowly wakes while all the fields are still.
A soothing calm on every breeze is borne.
A graver murmur gurgles from the hill,
And echoes answer softer from the hill,
And softer sings the linnets from the thorn.
The skylark warbles in a tone less shrill.
Hail, light serene! Hail, sacred Sabbath morn!
The rooks float silent by in airy dove,
The sun a placid yellow tuster throws,
The gales that lately sighed along the grove
Have hushed their downy wings in dead repose.
No hovering rock of clouds foreruns the morn,
So smelt the day when the first morn arose.
—John Leyden.

MACHIAVELLI'S MORALISMS.
All enterprises to be undertaken should be for the honor of God and the general good will of the country.
In well constituted governments the citizens fear more to break their oaths than the laws because they esteem the power of God more than that of men.
Even in war but little glory is derived from any fraud that involves the breaking of a given pledge and of agreements made.
It is impossible to believe that either valor or anything praiseworthy can result from a dishonest education or an impure and immodest mind.

SERVICE.
The sweetest lives are those to duty wed.
Whose deeds, both great and small,
Are close knit strands of an unbroken thread.
Where love envelopes all,
The world may sound no trumpet, ring no bells,
The book of life the shining record tells;
Thy love shall chant its own beatitudes
After our own life working. A child's kiss
Set on thy sighing lips shall make thee glad.
A sick man helped by thee shall make thee strong.
Thou shalt be served thyself in every sense.
Of service which to men thou renderest.
—Robert Browning.

INNER BEAUTY.
There is nothing in the whole world that can vie with the soul in its eagerness for beauty or in its ready power wherewith it adopts beauty unto itself. There is nothing in the world capable of such spontaneous uplifting, of such speedy enlightenment, nothing that offers more scrupulous obedience to the pure and noble commands it receives. There is nothing in the world that yields deeper submission to the empire of a thought that is loftier than other thoughts. And on this earth of ours there are but few souls that can withstand the dominion of the soul that has suffered itself to become beautiful.
In all truth, it might be said that beauty is the unique ailment of our soul, for in all places does it search for beauty, and it writhes not of languor even in the most degraded of lives, for, indeed, nothing of beauty can pass by and be altogether unperceived.—Marguerite Maeterlinck.
