The Electric Light & Power Co. workmen are installing a motor in the Times-Herald office with which to drive the printing machinery in the print shop and it will also be used to divert alternating current to direct current for the picture machine in Tonawama, as direct gives a much brighter and better picture. This is a new machine therefore Manager Dwyer is anxious to try it out. When in proper working order the gasoline engine in the office will be dispensed with and electricity used in the building exclusively.

The Jack Rabbit.

Since the extermination of the jack rabbit is important in this section, The Times-Herald gives space to the following letter recently published in the Onterio Democrat:

January 30, 1914.
Mr. E. C. Van Petten,
Ontario, Oregon.

Dear Sir:
Your letter of January 22, relative to the destructiveness of jack rabbits and asking for information on methods of destroying them, has been referred to this bureau for attention.

The experiments in Australia, which gave rise to the general belief that a method of spreading disease among rabbits has been discovered, proved a failure, and at present no such method is practiced. There are but two courses to pursue in dealing with the rabbits. If the community is sufficiently populous to make "drives" over considerable areas of country, that is, to surround a section or two and gradually drive the animals into a rabbit proof enclosure, this is a commendable method though too expensive if it is necessary to hire help.

In southern Idaho, where, under the stress of winter conditions, rabbits have flocked to hay stacks and to cultivated fields, we have found poisoning the most practical method of destroying them. We recommend the general use of poisoned oats under the direction of a competent man in each district. We have found the county authorities willing to assist to the extent of supplying strychnine for the work. The most effectual poison is as follows:

Dissolve one ounce of strychnine (alkaloid) in one pint of hot water containing 1/2 pint of vinegar, mix 2 tablespoons of ordinary starch in half a cup of cold water and add to the boiling strychnine solution to make a thin mucilage. Now dissolve 1 ounce of bi-carbonate of soda in half a cup of hot water, add to the poisoned starch, and stir well. Add 1/2 ounce of saccharine and mix the poison preparation with 10 quarts of oats. Allow to stand twenty-four to forty-eight hours, mixing occasionally when nearly dry, stir in about 5 qts of clean oats.

Each quart of the poisoned grain is sufficient for about thirty baits. This amount should be scattered slightly on clean surfaces about the hay stack along rabbit trails, or about the borders of fields. Stock or sheep need not be in the least endangered, if ordinary care is exercised in placing the poison. Valuable dogs might possibly be poisoned by eating a number of stomachs of poisoned rabbits but, of course, it is possible to muzzle such dogs or to keep them at home.

We suggest, as the most practical means for reducing the rabbits, that the residents in each district organize for general poisoning, and procure strychnine and grain. Poisoning is quite effective any conditions, but the plan should be such that full advantage can be taken of any severe weather, particularly when snow is on the ground, since the rabbits are then driven to the stacks and cultivated fields in great numbers.

We consider it advisable to have all the poison prepared by one man, who should also be responsible for storing it and distributing it to the ranchman with full direction for using it and caution as to its deadliness.

Isolated attempts to poison, by ranchmen here and there, will amount to practically nothing, and the method is commendable only if it can be put into general use. The organized campaigns in Idaho have not progressed far enough to conclude as to the success or failure of reducing the rabbits sufficiently to prevent damage in spring. In all tests by our field men, however, so many rabbits have been killed, that it is plain that vast numbers of them can be destroyed under organized effort.

Very truly yours,
S. E. PIPER,
Scientific Assistant.

Meander Line Case.

A law suit between Frank Cawfield and D. H. Smyth and his son Claud involving riparian right within the meander line of Malheur Lake was recently sent back by the supreme court for retrial. The Times-Herald could get no definite information last week respecting the reversal and order and expected information direct from Salem for this issue. This was not received in time, but the following letter explains: Ontario, Ore., Jan. 31, 1914. Messrs D. H. and Claude Smyth, Smith, Oregon.

Gentlemen:
The Supreme Court has reversed the case (Cawfield vs Smyth) and ordered a new trial. This reversal was on account of an erroneous instruction by the trial judge but does not militate against you in any respect, except the inconvenience of a new trial.

I have no doubt but that a new trial will result in your favor, and, by omitting the instruction to the jury on which the case was reversed, you will win, and the next time the Supreme Court will hold with you. I wish therefore you would explain the situation to the other settlers, on lands between the meander line and which is called a lake, in order that they may know their rights are not injuriously affected.

Very truly yours,
WILL R. KING.

Jack Winans, the new proprietor of the Windsor Barber Shop adjoining the land office, is prepared to do first class work in his line and invites a share of the public trade. Satisfaction in every respect. 48tf.

Danger of Reducing Mail Service.

According to information received at this office there is danger of an attempt to reduce service on star mail routes in various sections. This is the warning sent from Washington by Ex-Senator Bourne who advises prompt protest. The adoption of the parcel post resulted in an enormous increase in the mail, in fact the local stages are now bringing in great loads that have heretofore been confined to freight wagons. The merchants have taken advantage of the attractive rates as it is cheaper than freight. The contracts now being considered by the government show a decided increase in bids and it is feared an effort will be made to economize by cutting the service. This must not be allowed. It is quite evident that present bids will not be accepted until the matter has been thoroughly looked into by the government. We should keep this in mind and not allow our mail service to be curtailed.

We cannot imagine a measure more conducive to speculation and delay in settlement of the homestead country than that recently offered by Representative Sinnott. If residence need not be established on a claim for three years after entry, but few entrymen would actually settle. All the others would make entries in the hope of an advantageous resale before the time of residence was around. In the meantime the land would be tied up and no present settler benefited because the only way to future entrymen here have established residence already. The land to be given, let us suppose, is the land by which the farm loans are repaid. Bulletin

Library Club Meets.

The ladies of the Library Club met at the home of Mrs. Egli, on Saturday, February 7. After a short business meeting, the literary program followed consisting of three papers. Mrs. Foley reading a very efficient paper on "Women Famous in Song" in which she brought out the great power of song over the minds and hearts of men.

An interesting paper on "The Life and Benevolent Work of Mrs. Burdette Coult" was read by Mrs. Ione Whiting. "Auntie" Lamphire read an excellent paper on "Alice and Phoebe Cary." She was then asked to read a short poem composed by herself.

Lines Suggested on Hearing the Chimes of the Midnight Hour.

The clock strikes twelve, it seems to say gone, gone another day.
Another week, a month, a year,
How very short our life appears;
And as time quickly passes by,
The years in quick succession fly,
It scarce seems true since New Year's morn,
More than a month is past and gone—
Gone to be recalled no more,
And time, for us, will soon be o'er.
We know the young will soon grow old
The healthy will decay
And all the things we now behold will quickly pass away.
Soon, very soon, time travels fast,
And all our earthly pains be past,
Then over on the shining shore
We shall meet our loved ones gone before.

Wrinkled and gray, with form bent low,
An aged man passed by my door;
His eyes were dim, his steps were slow,
For he had numbered years four-score.
I looked again but saw him not,
But I have ceased to wonder why
He no more passes by my door—
I know the old must shortly die—
His body lies beneath the sod,
His spirit hath returned to God.

I saw a man whose useful strength
Had long been wasting by disease;
I did not think it strange that death
Upon his feeble frame should seize;
Affliction he for years had borne,
And oft with pain was sore distressed,
That when at length the summons came
He was so glad to be at rest,
Forever free from care and pain,
Our loss is his eternal gain.

Another comes. I fancy I can see him now
As if rejoicing in his might,
With youth and health upon his brow,
His limbs so firm his eyes so bright,
But suddenly his summons came
And all that health and brightness fled.
We dare not ask the reason why
He too, was numbered with the dead,
But in those heavenly mansions fair,
We hope to meet each other there.

A mother left her work awhile
To watch her smiling baby play,
When evening came it could not smile,
But sick upon her knees it lay,
And as she held it to her breast
And watched its cheeks grow white and cold.

She cried in agony of grief,
Why did it die, it was not old—
The judge of all the earth does right
And babes are precious in His sight.

Too well I read the solemn truth—
That all mankind must thus expire,
In pale decay or blooming youth—
The infant and its hoary sire
Through the gates of death, Alas,
Tell me whether do they pass.
We do not know nor can we tell,
but Jesus death all things well,
and thus before His throne we meet.
We'll meet our crowns at His dear feet.

Death comes to all in various ways.
Can he so while we live
daily pray for pardoning grace which God alone can give.
