BEER IN ANCIENT ENGLAND.

When the Law Demanded "Drynks" For the King's Subjects.

Authorities in England formerly took pains that the Londoner should not miss his full share of ale. In the sixteenth century, for instance, the brewer who ceased to brew was faced with the loss of his business. Thus, if the mayor got wind of "any of the subtle brewers, of their frowarde and perverse myndes, shall at any time hereafter sodenly forbeare and absteyne from brevinge, whereby the king's subjects should be destitute or unprovided of drynke," he knew exactly what to do. The city council was empowered to take over the business as a going concern and to take measures to see that it was kept going.

The cry then and for centuries after was all for beer. There is record of a petition of 1621, for instance, praying that tea, coffee and brandy be banned. The petitioners censured that the laborers needed "good strong beer and ale," which "refreshed their bodies and neither did them prejudice nor hinder of their work."

Besides, it cost little and was the product of home grown grain, whereas the new fangled drink was expensive and destroyed his majesty's subjects, "not agreeing with their constitution."—Chicago News.

LIGHT AND HEAT.

How They Reach Us From Out the Icy Coldness of Space.

In answer to the question, "It is thought that in space eternal cold and darkness prevail—what then is the explanation of the fact that both light and heat from the sun, some 90,000,000 miles away in cold space, reach the earth?" Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

"Heat and light as such do not reach the earth from our own and 100,000,000 more suns. Radiant energy is transmitted by undulations or waves in electrons, which energy is in the forms of waves of varying lengths and amplitudes. When some of these energy impulses impinge on matter able to receive and appreciate them heat and light result.

"Many molecules in many thousands of kinds of matter are able to translate energy waves into heat, while others are translated as light on the retina of the eye and in the brain. But no heat nor light develops until the waves strike forms of matter fitted to receive, appreciate and translate.

"Thus energy will pass through a 'burning glass' made of ice, converge to a focus and set light objects on fire."

Shipwrecks and Courts Martial.

The custom of holding courts martial in the British navy after every case of shipwreck has a curious origin. In 1741 the Wager, one of Commodore Anson's vessels, was wrecked off the coast of Chile, most of the crew being saved. The men and some of the junior officers held that they were no longer amenable to discipline because their pay ceased with the wreck, but the captain, whose name was Davy Cheap, differed, treated them as mutineers and shot one of his midshipmen. He was then deposed, and most of the crew made off in three of the boats. Later when it was proposed to proceed against the so called mutineers the law officers of the crown decided that the men had been correct in their view. This discovery led to the framing of section 31 of the articles of war, which provides that in the case of shipwreck, destruction or capture by the enemy a ship is held to remain in commission pending inquiry by a court martial.

Houseboats of the Thames.

The row of houseboats, each with its flowers, awning, flotilla of skiffs, the quantities of well groomed boats for hire among the willows all along the Thames' banks—this impression comes on the top of that of the half hour the other day coming into London in a sickly fog, of the horrible miles of Bermondsey and Lambeth along the lines, the endless heaps of rubbish, the hurry and grime of the two stations at Waterloo. The houseboats, etc., are the elaborate flower of that ugly plant called civilization. They stand for the comfort, the luxury, the high standard of England, which even in its lower walks of life offers similar prizes, similar complications, luxuries unknown abroad. One says to oneself: "How those people know how to live! How they exploit life!"—Vernon Lee in Scribner's.

Wasted Effort.

"Now, Tommy," said the Sunday school teacher, "suppose you had two apples and you gave another boy his choice of them. You would tell him to take the largest one, wouldn't you?"

"No, ma'am," said Tommy promptly.

"Why, Tommy!" exclaimed the teacher in shocked surprise. "Why not?"

"Well," said Tommy, "in the bunch it wouldn't be necessary to tell him that."—New York Globe.

There Must Be Something In It.

"Do you believe there is really any such thing as love at first sight?"

"Certainly there is. If there was no such thing how many of the married men whom you know would ever have been able to enchant their wives?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Obliging.

"Will you corroborate my statements?"

"Sure. I can't do that. But I'll stand by what ye say."—Baltimore American.

They conquer who believe they can.—Old Saying.

Human experience, like the stern lights of a ship at sea, illumines only the path which we have passed over.—Coleridge.

What Changed Him.

Mistress finding visitor in the kitchen)—Who is this, Mary? Mary (confused)—My brother, m'm. Mistress (suspiciously)—You're not much alike. Mary (stammering apologetically)—We were, m'm, but he's just had his beard shaved off, and that makes him look different."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Modern Structures.

"What's the matter with this elevator?" asked the nervous man. "You keep trying to run it through the roof."

"You'll have to excuse me," replied the operator. "I'm not used to one of these little twenty story buildings."—Washington Star.

Sinning Over the Victim.

"Your teeth are in pretty bad condition."

"They must be," sighed the patient. "You look so happy."—Judge.

He is half done who has made a beginning.—Old Saying.

YOUR PLACE IN THE WORLD.

Fill it Well, For, Though It May Be Small, It Is Important.

It is the privilege of a limited number of mortals to stand in the limelight and be applauded, to have a pathway cleared for their progress and an attentive audience for their highest account of command or exhortation. Most of us fill humble places. We are not heard of at our birth, nor when we die. We make one more in the crowded thoroughfare. The "hungry generations tread us down." Life's swollen current roars and eddies about the little canoe we are trying to paddle through the rapids and stream. "What is the use?" we ask. And of what use are we? What difference would it make if we gave up the fight? Who would notice our vanishing, and what is one life among so many?

In that mood of discouragement it is to be remembered that each of us has his place which he alone can fill. There are others, no doubt, who can do the same kind of work, but they cannot do our work. History is full of tragedies due to the failure not alone of emperors, but of peasants—not merely of commanding generals, but of privates in the ranks—and the collapse of a great cause has been due to the fact that one incompetent man in a small place has thought it made no difference if he ran away.—Philadelphia Ledger.

NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE.

They Display It in an Acute Form in Tomsk, Siberia.

In "Through Siberia—An Empire In the Making," by H. L. Wright and Bassett Digby, the authors tell us that the city of Tomsk has two morning dailies. Any important news that comes over the wires during the day is struck off on handbills, which are sold in the streets as "telegramma." At the time of the Russo-Chinese crisis there came early one morning the startling report that the Russian minister at Peking had been assassinated.

"One of the papers at once rushed a handbill through the press, but before it was distributed came the official denials from St. Petersburg and Peking in keeping with the best journalistic traditions of the occident, the editor had the denials printed on a second handbill.

"Then he called all the newsboys into the inner office, explained the situation with the utmost candor, handed out supplies of each bill to the eager lads and told them to run the streets crying 'Horrible Assassination' until the 'Horrible Assassination' had sold out. Then, after resting up for ten minutes, they were to open a chorus of 'Startling Sequel' and proceed to sell out all their 'Startling Sequels.' And they did."

Knew What to Do.

Speaking of rare presence of mind recently recalled to ex-President Taft the case of a handsome young woman of his acquaintance. She had gone to the railway station to meet a man friend of the family, and when he debarked from the train the young man lost his head and impulsively kissed her. The girl thought it the part of prudence to tell her mother of the affair, upon which the latter was simply horrified.

"You don't mean to tell me that he had the impudence to kiss you?" she cried. "And to think of the crowd at the station! Why, my dear, what did you do in such an embarrassing situation?"

"Why, mother, I just kissed him back, of course," coolly replied the young woman. "I wanted to give all those people the impression that we were relatives."—New York Tribune.

Very Strange.

Mr. Fuss (furiously)—It is mighty strange you can't look after things a little better. Here I want to shave, and there isn't a drop of hot water here. Mrs. Fuss (icily)—It is strange. Why, that's the one thing I've never been out of since I married you!—Exchange.

Danger Not Imminent.

"Better go home, Jimmy. Your mother is looking for you."

"Has she got the hairbrush with her?"

"No."

"Then I guess I'll play awhile longer."—Pittsburgh Post.

One Word.

"Henry," called Mrs. E. over the partition in the voting booth, "how are you going to vote on amendment No. 2?" He—I am going to vote "yes." She—No, you're not; you're going to vote "no." I have changed my mind.—Life.

JUVENILE HIGH FINANCE.

Give Him Half a Chance and This Chap Will Own the World.

A pupil in one of the well known boys' schools, being short of pocket money, conceived a means of replenishing the funds by the following ploy.

He wrote to a jewelry house in New York, where he had an established credit, asking that a silver cigarette case suitable at $25 be sent to him on approval. Upon its receipt he arranged a lottery among his chums at the school and offered for sale 200 chances at 25 cents each. He sold all the chances for a total of $50.

The boy who held the successful number that won the silver case happened to be one who did not use cigarettes, and therefore the manager of the affair offered to buy the case for $5. The winner accepted the offer, as he thereby made a profit of $4.75 cash instead of having an article of no use to him, whereas the promoter of the deal had $20 left.

The promoter now returned the cigarette case to the jeweler and asked that it be credited to his account. This being a frequent occurrence, nothing was thought of the return of the article.

By this scheme the pockets of the young promoter were replenished by $20, the other boys had enjoyed their little game of chance and were perfectly satisfied with the operation, and the business house was likewise satisfied. But some people who have heard of the transaction are asking, "Is the young financier open to any criticism for his methods?"—New York Sun.
