Beneficial Exercise. Exercise to be beneficial must do

First.-It must slightly increase the strength and force of the heart beat. so as to improve the circulation and do away with any tendency to sluggish-and deepen the breathing rate so that more pure air is drawn into the lungs and less impure air is left behind. Third.-It must stimulate into nor mal activity the myriads of glands in the skin whose duty it is to rid the body of a part of the polsonous substances constantly being formed with-Practically any exercise, if carried out with the correct degree of moderation, will accomplish these results and so deserves the term "beneficial exercise." The trouble is that indulged in past moderation almost every form of exercise can do more harm than good .- New York World.

The Greeting of Democracy. The story that the kalser loves most tell his intimates, declares Mr. liam Armstrong in the Woman's Magnsine, concerns the visit of his brother.
