Music Born of Sorrow.

There is no nation naturally musical, according to Henri Bidou, critic and historian. If a nation is musical, he says, it is because it has passed through such tribulation that it has been driven to express its sorrow and anxiety in its airs and compositions. Bach, he declares, is the culminating expression of sufferings induced in Germany by the Thirty Years' war, fifty years before Bach's time.

People sing "like cowards," he continues, to keep up their spirits in bad moments, and he finds that the real countries of music are nearly all frontier provinces exposed to external vicissitudes.

England he finds exempt to a large extent from the occasions in which poets "learn in suffering what they teach in song" because it is protected from invasion by the girdle of the seas. Music, then, he argues, is not an art of peace; it originates in strife and anxiety, not in tranquillity and concord. The overprosperous countries, he discovers, "not only have no history; they have no music."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

By the Author.

Rabindranath Tagore, the Indian poet, who gained the $40,000 Nobel prize for literature, is a well known figure in London society, and to a London correspondent he said recently:

"In India the little children babble worse at the age of five or six. We are not like you. With you, if a full grown man or woman suddenly manages to write a few rimes the thing is deemed almost a miracle.

"I sat in a magazine office the other morning while the editor opened his mail. He tossed a letter to me.

"'That's the sort of thing I'm continually receiving,' he said.

"The letter ran:

"Dear Editor—The poem inclosed is original in me, and I had no help in thinking out same. It is a true poem. I wrote it myself, and there is more where it came from if I had any inducement to think same out. You may say 'Original' at the top of same, for every word is by

"THE AUTHOR."

When Soldiers Were Flogged.

It would have needed a very alluring form of advertisement indeed to attract men to the English army a hundred years ago. Writing of that period a writer says: "Flogging was almost universal. The maximum number of lashes were gradually reduced from 1,500 to 300, but the notion that discipline could not be maintained without summary punishment continued to be believed, and Wellington himself dealt with flagrant cases by hanging the culprits upon trees in the public roads. One result was that only men belonging to the lowest classes would join the army." In 1771 a sentinel in the guards was flogged in St. James' park so severely that he subsequently died raving mad. His offense consisted of saying that "there was no more encouragement for a good soldier than for a bad one."

Too Much Cavity.

One afternoon an esteemed citizen went into a barber shop to have his briers reaped, but no sooner had he taken a seat in one of the chairs than he dropped off into heavy slumber. Apparently the shave artist was having his own troubles in manipulating the customer, and after making several attempts he thoughtfully paused.

"Excuse me, sir," said he, gently shaking the man in the chair, "but would you mind waking up? I can't shave you while you are asleep."

"Can't shave me while I'm asleep," exclaimed the victim, with a wondering expression. "Why not?"

"Because," explained the barber as softly as possible, "when you fall into slumber your mouth opens so wide that I can't find your face."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Easy Time.

The man who learns many languages does not always enlarge his mind. A porter in a Swiss hotel who spoke many languages with equal facility and inaccuracy was once asked what was his native tongue. He replied that he did not know, but that he spoke all languages.

"But in what language do you think?" asked the persistent questioner.

"I neva tink," was the prompt reply.—Youth's Companion.

Lacked Tact.

"A fellow told me today," confided Mr. D'Ippie, "that I didn't know enough to pound sand. He said that I was the blamedest idiot he ever saw. Now, what do you think of that?"

"I think it was dreadfully tactless of him," exclaimed Miss Keene indignantly.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Considerate.

"And would you marry me if I were a poor girl, working for a living?" asked the heiress.

"Darling," responded the accepted suitor, "it wouldn't be fair. You'd be doing enough in supporting yourself."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Forbearing Waiter.

"That waiter didn't thank you when you gave him a quarter."

"I didn't want him to. I was grateful to him for holding the coin up so that every one in the room could see it was only a quarter."—Washington Star.

Sure Protection.

Customer (trying on dress suit, jokingly)—I hope I'll never be mistaken for a waiter. Tailor—When in doubt, keep your hands in your pockets!—Judge.

It is well to learn to work intensely. —Charles W. Eliot.

She Missed Queen Victoria.

Loie Fuller in her book tells us how she failed to see Queen Victoria, a misfortune due to the exigencies of theatrical contracts.

"One day at Nice some one came and asked me to dance before Queen Victoria. She had just arrived at the Riviera to pass the winter months, as she was accustomed to do every year. It may well be believed that I was flattered by such a request. I assented, naturally, and set myself to work making all my preparations for this important event.

"There was a knock at the door. A maid brought a telegram. It was signed by my manager and was couched in the following words: 'Take train this evening, to sail day after tomorrow; destination, New York.'

"I replied with a message pleading for a delay for the purpose of dancing before Queen Victoria. I received simply the following laconic telegram: 'Impossible. Leave at once. Time is money.'

"That's why I did not dance before Queen Victoria."

Rebuked.

The Germans—as all extensively traveled persons know—are great sticklers for titles. One must not only say Herr Cancellarius Bols, Herr Dr. Baron Meier, Herr Professor Schmidt; one must also say Frau Cancellarius Bols, Frau Dr. Baronin Meier, Frau Professor Schmidt. Also there are fine distinctions in titles. If one title is higher than another by so much as a hair's breadth, the wayfaring man must not call the rightful owner of the higher title by the lower title. Never!

A certain public schoolteacher who already enjoyed the title of master was promited to head master. Next day young Fritz, quite unaware as yet of the honor that had come to his instructor overnight, greeted him with his usual cheery "Good morning, master."

"Perhaps," said the new head master with dignity—"perhaps you'd rather just call me Adolf."—New York Post.

Opposed to Knighthood.

Coke of Norfolk, who eventually went to the lords as Earl of Leicester, was furious when threatened with knighthood. After an attack on the prince regent's life in 1817 Coke was chosen to present him with an address from the Norfolk Whigs. They congratulated him heartily on his escape, but concluded by beseeching him to "dismiss from his presence and council those advisers who by their conduct had proved themselves alike enemies to the throne and people." On learning the terms of the proposed address the regent, who knew that Coke valued his position as commoner above everything, declared, "If Coke enters my presence I shall knight him." When this threat was reported to Coke he replied, "If he dare try to knight me I swear I'll break his sword."—London Chronicle.

Ashes of the Great.

The city republic of Florence gathered her famous dead at Santa Croce, save "the all Etruscan three," Dante, Petrarch and Boccaccio. England has made Westminster abbey the burial place of such men as Chaucer, Spenser, Newton, Darwin and Tennyson, besides a baker's dozen of kings. But in America the ashes of the great are scattered far and wide. Washington rests at Mount Vernon, Va.; Lincoln at Springfield, Ill. The tomb of Paul Jones is an inspiration to students in the naval academy at Annapolis. Poe sleeps at Baltimore; Mark Twain at Elmira, N. Y.; Alexander Hamilton in old Trinity churchyard, surrounded by towering skyscrapers which embody his philosophy of life and government. Is not America's way the best? England and Florence make things handier for the tourist, but is he the chief person to consider? Since our heroes come from all the land is it not best that their ashes return to the soil from which they sprang, till youth in every neighborhood has some reminder of public service and noble work?—Chicago Journal.

The Torment of Cold.

I thank heaven that I know what it is to be cold, to be cold from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot, to be cold from the cuticle in to the heart, and from the heart to the soul. I thank heaven for it, because, knowing this, I have a new revelation of the possibility of suffering, and I am able to find a paradise in a common wood fire.

Knowing this, I declare to you there is not a more pathetic sight in the world than a poor man who is thoroughly cold from week to week. It is the refinement of torture.

It does not gnaw like hunger, which presently becomes a sort of insanity and relieves itself. It is a dead, unbiest, icy torment. I used to see men in the army whose silent endurance of cold brought more tears to my eyes than all the hunger and all the wounds. —Sidney Lanier.

A Candidate's Revenge.

French electors occasionally have some home truths thrown at them by candidates who fail to secure enough votes. At one general election M. Albert Normand, a chemist and druggist, who was a candidate for deputy from Montagne, received only six votes and issued an address thanking "the six electors who showed their confidence in me. They are the only solvent citizens in the constituency, and I beg to assure them of my esteem. As for the others, I hereby give them notice that in future all attempts to obtain credit at my establishment will be relentlessly refused. During the last nine years they have robbed me of about 3,000 francs in bad debts, which I have taken no steps to recover. Yet when an opportunity is afforded of showing their appreciation of my leniency I meet with the basest ingratitude."

Carlyle and London's Noises.

No one has ever inveighed against the noises of London with such picturesque emphasis as Thomas Carlyle. When Augustus Hare met him for the first time at a dinner given by Lady Marian Alford most of Carlyle's conversation ran upon the sufferings attached to a London residence. "That which the world torments me in most," he moaned, "is the awful confusion of noise. It is the devil's own infernal din all the blessed day long, confounding God's works and his creatures—a truly awful hell-like combination, and worst of all is a railway whistle, like the screech of 10,000 cats and every cat of them as big as a cathedral." Against this diatribe may be set the fact that Carlyle spent the last forty-seven years of his life in London without any compulsion to live there.

Helping His Temper.

The sun was blinding, clouds of dust were blowing everywhere, and Jones was most decidedly off his game. It really "put the lid on it" when, just as he was struggling to play his ball out of a quarry, a benevolent old lady passed by with a companion. She halted in evident surprise and pointed with her umbrella at the earnest golfer. "Dear me, my love," she remarked in audible tones, "what a very respectably dressed man that is breaking stones!"—Argonaut.

He Admired Her Judgment.

She—Oh, Fred, dear, you are so noble, so generous, so handsome, so chivalrous, so much the superior of every man I meet, I can't help loving you. Now, what can you see in plain little me to admire? He—Oh, I don't know, dear, but you certainly have very good judgment.—London Tit-Bits.

The old, old law of growth, "To them that hath shall be given," holds just as truly in the feed lot and hog pen as it does among trees in the forest, among men in business or in the case of the individual in the building up of physical, mental and moral forces. Because of this fact precautions should be taken to see that the weaklings have a place where they can get the fed they need unmolested by older and stronger animals. Unless such aid is given one might just about as well knock such runts on the head.

Dazed the Crank.

David P. Barrows, while acting president of the University of California, one day received a queer visitor. Lean and terribly earnest, the man broke into Barrows' study.

"I am the prophet Micah," he announced, "and I have a need for your service. The world is soon to come to an end. Could you not spread the tidings through the university?"

Dr. Barrows shook his visitor by the hand, collected his thoughts and replied: "I believe that at no time was there such a crying need for prophets. But, unfortunately, prophesying is an art with which I am unfamiliar. I am not even in close sympathy with it and, as I am unable to comprehend what you have accomplished, I confess inability to participate as a prognosticator."

Whether it was the unexpected reply or the quick fire of so many words that dazed the visitor will never be known. Certain it is the man backed to the door and uttered the inadequate reply, "Yes."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Gentlemen of Leisure.

One of the upper ten thousand, once visiting America, accepted the hospitality of a gentleman in New York. When taking farewell of his host the latter asked him what he thought of the American people.

"Well," answered the nobleman, "I like them immensely, but I miss something."

"What is that?" asked the Yankee.

"I miss the aristocracy," replied the Englishman.

"What are they?" naively asked his host.

"The aristocracy!" said the nobleman in a somewhat surprised tone of voice. "Why, they are people who do nothing, you know; whose fathers did nothing, you know; whose grandfathers did nothing, you know—in fact, the aristocracy!"

Here he was interrupted by the American, who chimed in with, "Oh, we've plenty of them over here, but we don't call them aristocracy—we call them tramps."—Exchange.

Washington's Only Joke.

The only admirable quality in which Washington was deficient was humor. One of the very few jests he ever made—perhaps the only one—has descended to posterity on the authority of his aid-de-camp, Colonel Humphreys.

General Washington rather prided himself on his riding, so the colonel one day when they were out hunting together dared him to follow over one particular hedge. The challenge was accepted, and Humphreys led the way. He took the leap boldly, but to his consternation found that he had mistaken the spot and was sunk up to his horse's girth in a quagmire. The general either knew the ground better or had suspected something, for, following at an easy pace, he reined up at the hedge and, looking over at his engulfed aid, exclaimed, "No, no, colonel, you are too deep for me!"
