Embarrassing. In South Africa General French earned the title of "the shirt sleeved general," Mr. Chisheim says in "Sir John French." General French was often to be seen walking about in camp in shirt sleeves. One afternoon a corre ent rode up to the lines and, seeng a soldier sitting on a bundle of hay moking a dilapidated looking old brian pipe, asked where the general was. The old man is somewhere about,"

"Well, just hold my horse while I go and search for him."

"Certainly, sir," and the smoker obediently and took the bridle. "Can you tell me where the general ts?' inquired the correspondent of a "General French? Ob, he's some where about. Why, there he is, hold

And the officer pointed directly to the smoker, still tranquilly pulling at his pipe and holding the horse.

City of Magnificent Distances. When the government was moved to Washington in 1800 it was far from being a satisfactory place of residence The city was laid out in the wilder They "took to the woods" for a capital city. It was the first time that a government had actually gone into the wilds and selected a site for a capital and laid out its city on a weil defined plan. As beautiful as we consider Washington today, the minister from Portugal, the Abbe Corea, who considered one of the greates wits of his time and who in 1816 called it "the city of magnificent distances," so named it purely in derision. In that day there was little but distance in the city. As late as 1842 Charles Dickens, after his visit, wrote that "its streets begin to nothing and lead nowhere."-Frederick L. Fishback in Na-tional Magazine.

Sikh's Disk of Death. Sikh soldiers can certainly claim to possess a unique form of wespon. It cuts like a knife paper when it strikes my ob

At a distance of a hundred yards the disk is capable of cutting its way through a piece of hard wood two inches thick. It is the peculiar twist given to the weapon when it is thrown which causes the cutting edge to bury itself so remorselessly in anything that it meets. It is doubtful whether any but the Sikhs could effectively use this

Broad Brimmed Hats. Toward the end of the thirteenth century big broad brimmed hats were fashionable in Austria. They were of such huge dimensions that a face unof them could not be recognized. A poem written by Johannes Hadlaub expresses disgust with the style and the hope that the bats might signed to the Danube "so that the pretty faces of our women might once more become visible."

The Green Flames. The greatest discovery of borax ever made was the result of the purest chance. A number of years ago a man named Aaron Winters was prospecting for gold or other precious metals in that American inferno known as Death valley. He had his wife with him, and they two worked together antil their ons were at an end; then, biterly disappointed at their ill success they started back toward civilization. The first night they camped in Ash valley. Here they lit a fire and pre-pared to cook their supper. Mrs. Winters called her husband's attention to the peculiar green tinge of the flames. He did not speak, but with shaking hands scratched away the earth and suddenly shouted: "We're rich, Rose; we're rich! It's borax!" He was right.

They subsequently sold their claim for a very large sum. Stitting a Pen. The center slit in a pen is cut by a machine which seems almost to think. It consists of two chisels which barely pass each other when the slit is made, and the exact way in which the pen is possed as as to class the chisele in the poised so as to pince the chinels in the proper position for cutting is one of the maryels of penmaking.

TRACING COUNTERFEITERS.

Secret Bervice Agente Have Speedily Effective System.

Some time ago one of the local banks caught during the day a counterfeit ten dollar bill. It was such a clever counterfeit it would pass anybody but an expert. The next day ten or fifteen more of the bad bills were found in the city,

Then the government's machinery to protect its currency began to work. But there was nothing mysterious about its working. In the office of the secret service here an official sat all afternoon smoking and looking at spec-imens of counterfeit currency. Huge clouds of smoke rose from his pipe. That kept up all day. The reader detective tales who believes the secret service works in a mysterious way would have been distinctly disappoint ed. But at last the pipe dropped from the lips of the man sitting at the desk in the federal building with a whole pile of greenbacks in front of him. He took up two bills and compared them carefully. Then he studied them again, noting every little curve and character istic mark. He stepped to the tele-phone and called the United States orison at Leavenworth. "Was James Ward, alian Stewart. alias Nolan, in prison?"

No. James of the two allases had been out six months. Then telegrams went out to certain officers in certain cities. How they located James Ward the government keeps as a secret Later the counterfeiter was arrested at Springfield, Ill., and his outfit for raising bills was found with him.

And so another counterfelter was caught and put out of business. How was it done? Simple enough-if you belong to the secret service. Every counterfelter has some distinguishing characteristic in his work, some little curve or break in a line that gives blu The secret service agent compared the new counterfelt with dozen of old counterfeits. At last he found the telltale distinguishing characteris tic. And the rest was easy.

James of the two allases and counterfeiting device had served three terms before. So there was plenty of his samples. - Kansas City Times.

STOCKBROKERS OF PARIS.

When They Fail They Are Invariable Treated as Criminals. An agent de change (Paris ste broker) can under the rule of the code of commerce never be adjudged bankcupt pure and simple, his insolvency always involving more or less criminal responsibility. In the absence of fraud the penalty is hard labor for a term, but in case of fraud the punish ment is no less than hard labor for

The public, however, never suffers from the insolvency of an agent de change, because his liabilities, no matter what they amount to, are always taken care of and liquidated in full by the other members of the corporation, who contribute obligatorily each year to a sort of insurance fund or reserve for this purpose. Besides, each of them must before being appointed make a deposit of 250,000 or 300,000 france at the freasury, which allows them an interest of 2% per cent.

An agent de change, according to section 85 of the code of commerce. nust not transact any commercial or banking business for his own account He must have no financial interest in any commercial enterprise, whether in his own name or under an assumed name. He cannot even receive payment or settle any account on behalf of his clients. The pensity for the violation of this rule may be a fine of 3,000 france and eventually the dismissal of the offender.-Exchange.

The sight of a man trimming a tree uddenly falling to the ground, killed by a shock from as electric wire agninst which the branches were blown, leads Philip E. In 1782 James Price, a distinguished amateur chemist and fellow of the British Royal society, announced that had succeeded in inventing a meth od of converting mercury and other to ferior metals into gold and silver. He nducted a series of experiments in the presence of a number of men of rank and science which were apparent successful. Some of the gold thus oduced was presented to the king. and the University of Oxford, hearing of this, immediately conferred on Price the honorary degree of M. D. But deree controversy arose, and be was requested to prove the trath of his discovery before the Royal society. He assented, and on the appointed day the critics assembled at his house.
