Artesian Water on Gray

Under date of Sept. 18 Walter Gray writes this office that his father, P. H. Gray, had struck an artesian flow of water on his farm in Crane Creek Gap at a depth of 120 feet. The flow comes from bed rock and is cold

Mr. Gray has owned this place for many years and has been meeting at 7:30 p. m. farming it during recent years with good success. He already ing at 7; 30 p. m. had two fine wells on the place, one at the house being exception- and needy at any time. ally good water and he used this to irrigate his garden. Walter doesn't say how strong the flow Frank Clerf Sustains a is from the artesian well, but no doubt it is sufficient to irrigate some land and will be a great boon to Mr. Gray.

This place is right along the railroad route and therefore it is made more valuable on account of this flowing well.

Prineville People Look For Railroad Soon.

According to a recent issue of the Prineville Journal that city looks forward to a railroad in the immediate future. A big concern owns considerable timber east of that town and the representatives of the lumber people are getting busy with the proposition of putting a road to these fire risk makes it imperative that the timber be gotten to the market. It is proposed to establish mills at Prineville and bring the logs to that point to be manufactured. There are 30,000 acres of timber.
