After witnessing the land and products show at Portland and seeing the exhibits of the several counties that participated one is impressed with this method of publicity and the writer regrets that Harney county did not participate. However, the writer finds we are more talked of just at present not only in Portland but also in San Francisco at the Oregon building at the fair, than any other county in the state. Harney county is on the map but had we realized the remarkable yield of crops during the past season and had taken advantage of the opportunity for more publicity we should have received big returns. Morrow county took first prize at the show with Polk second, then followed other eastern Oregon counties, Union, Malheur, Baker, Wallowa and others. Malheur county confined itself to an exhibit of alfalfa and corn entirely with no embellishments and one was surprised to see how it attracted. In fact the writer was astonished to see the corn display as he hadn't seen better since he left Missouri.

The Bend Bulletin suggest to their local Commercial Club that they invite Mr. Strahorn to come to Bend and tell of his plans and what he desires in the way of co-operation in the building of the railroad through Central Oregon, thus securing first hand information and getting on common ground. The suggestion is a good one and while they are at it let the local railroad get busy and second the Bend invitation by inviting Mr. Strahorn to Burns and thus kill two birds with one stone.

The Times-Herald has nothing to gain directly from the appointment of a county agriculturist, but is interested in the development of farming therefore is somewhat disappointed that there is so little interest shown in the matter. The expense is slight and the possibilities great. Of course if the farmers do not show a disposition to insist upon a county agriculturist the court will not make any provisions for one.

Railroad Dope.

The Portland Chamber of Commerce News makes this comment on the railroad: In the construction of the Oregon California & Eastern Railway materials will be used that are largely home products. If the sum of $1,500,000 asked of Oregon in financing the project is put up, the money will come right back where it was secured. It will be like transferring $1,000,000 from pocket to pocket in the same pair of trousers. The raising of that sum of money is necessary to show Oregon's faith in the empire that will produce $150,000,000 annually. The prompt raising of that sum will make it possible to secure the balance of $4,500,000 from Eastern sources. And probably from 65 to 75 per cent of the eastern money will remain in this state.

These advantages are, however, only the temporary ones. Permanent benefits will be realized when the railroad is in full operation and the great quantities of land products grown east of the Cascade mountains begin to move to market. Portland will be the gateway for outgoing shipments, and at the same time a splendid market will be opened in Central and Southeastern Oregon for those articles of commerce that are handled by Portland merchants.

Eighty-five per cent of the goods now consumed in Southeastern Oregon are shipped in from Boise and Salt Lake.

The Oregon Country, of Portland had this to say in its latest issue: "The proposed new railroad in Central Oregon radiating in three directions from Bend is logical and will unquestionably become a reality in the near future. The sum involved in its construction is exceedingly small in comparison to its earning capacity. The fact that the man behind it is one of Oregon's real railroad builders—R. E. Strahorn—gives it the stamp of reliability. The business interests of the state cannot overlook this latest move in their behalf.

"Every mile of railroad that is constructed means so much development and resultant cash in their pockets. We hear the same objections to this road that were manifested at the time other roads, long since huge successes, were contemplated. These are the bleats of the pessimist—and the pessimist in civil life is the coward in the army. Every encouragement should be given Strahorn and his associates. Oregon needs more railroads and the particular sections through which the proposed road is to traverse 'will blossom like the rose' when transportation will be at its door.

Catlow Valley Wedding.

(Contributed)

The first wedding ever occurring in Catlow Valley was solemnized at the Pioneer school house on Sunday night, Nov. 7th. The contracting parties were Charles E. Bradley and Miss Joy Moore and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Baird of Baker. The wedding party entered the room to the strains of a march played by Miss May Byram and after a few well chosen remarks by the minister the couple were made one. The parts of best man and bridesmaid were ably enacted by W. M. Carroll and Miss Edith Beckley.

The groom is a substantial young homesteader of the south part of the Valley and the bride is the estimable daughter of Charles Moore of Berdugo. The Times-Herald Catlow reporter voices the sentiment of the entire community in wishing these young people a long, prosperous and happy life.

How to Prevent Croup.

It may be a surprise to you to learn that in many cases croup can be prevented. Mrs. H. M. Johns, Elidia, Ohio, relates her experience as follows: "My little boy is subject to croup. During the past winter I kept a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and when he began having that croupy cough I would give him one or two doses of it and it would break the attack. I like it better for children than any other cough medicine because children take it willingly, and it is safe and reliable." Sold by all dealers.

Developing Harney Valley.

To the Editor:—The development and settlement of the Harney Valley is the hope and desire generally of its people. True there are a few individual residents and land owners, as are to be found in every community, who are satisfied with present conditions.

In order to assure adequate transportation it is necessary to show an intention and ability to develop in manner and to extent proving a reasonable chance for business that would eventually justify the extensions.

In order to bring about development that will render the valley capable of its highest production and settlement the flood waters must be controlled and beneficially used over the largest possible area.

In order to ascertain the surplus water and the amount which can be beneficially used under our soil and climatic conditions it is necessary to have the findings of the State Water Board, whose duty it is under our laws to adjudicate these matters.

The installation and operation of the Company's Boat Ford dam, whereby a large part of the water of the East Fork was thrown westward over the company's lands, caused water claimants in the lower part of the valley to petition for the present adjudication proceeding. After the smaller claimants down in the Lawen country put in their proofs and testified to conditions and use of water entirely satisfactory to Mr. Treadwell, the company dropped down to the northeast corner of its big Red S field and have constructed ditches and works whereby whatever water passing the Boat Ford dam can be again turned westward over the company's lands. The lower portion of the valley can thus be deprived of all its water, is this for the purpose of developing the country or of forcing the claimants and perhaps the State Water Board to commence some more new, healthy litigation that can drag its useful life out through the courts? The ordinary citizen, having respect or at least a wholesome fear of the law, would first apply for and secure permits for appropriating water before constructing works.

The state of Oregon has questioned the title to certain lands claimed by the P. L. S. Co. in this county, including much of that involved in the adjudication. Suit to cancel the Company's title was instituted more than 18 months ago and the issues are joined. Our representative in the last legislature, Hon. Frank Davey, provided money for investigation and securing witnesses and evidence in the case. Early in the session a bill was introduced carrying a $5,000 appropriation for the case and Mr. Davey states that sufficient support was promised to insure its passage regardless of the report of the ways and means committee. Later, at the request of Representative Cobb, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, this bill was withdrawn on the representation that money for the suit would be included in the general appropriation bill for the attorney General's office.

The latter bill passed appropriating $10,000, without any restrictions, for all land fraud cases, including the P. L. S. Co. suit. Certain state officials have gone on record in favor of dismissing this suit ostensibly on the ground that it was stale and interfered with big business, (the big business of a foreign cattle company being superior to the development of a large section of remote and thinly settled Central Oregon.)

Atty. Gen. Brown, head of the state's legal department, is convinced that the facts should be thoroughly investigated and if the state has a reasonable chance that it should be tried out. Some scattering investigation has been made but the Attorney General's office claims it is handicapped by the great volume of business before it and the lack of available funds, claiming it would be impossible to get expense vouchers through the State Treasury until such time as the Attorney General can practically guarantee winning the suit. In other words Mr. Brown can have no money or assistance with which to investigate the matter until he has investigated it. Just as clear as state politics. Money and help are provided to advise every cross-road official in the state but he can't send an assistant out on the most important case pending in the State of Oregon today with assurance that his expenses will be paid.

If the company built up a land monopoly in defiance of laws which provided a limit in acquiring public lands and now claim a water monopoly as appurtenant thereto, the allegations of the complaint, it certainly is a serious impediment to all proposed development. Why should the matter not be brought to issue and determined? The people of the state have provided money for this purpose and the importance of the results demand thorough and quick action. If the money appropriated for this express purpose cannot be used under the edict of some higher power a fund should be raised and the suit carried on. I believe that the people of this section should rise up and insist upon this being done.

Respectfully,
C. B. MCCONNELL.

Burns Citizen Inventor.

The Rev. S. L. Flowers, pastor of the local Nazarene church, besides being pastor and preacher, author of several books, compiler and editor of a song book, composer of church hymns, has also invented a novel device, patent having just been issued, of a public locker. It is a coin controlled automatic machine and will protect the public places having need of same as well as their patrons and guests. It will be especially servicable in depots, hotels, public baths, etc., eliminating the present checking system. Rev. Mr. Flowers will soon have a model on exhibition in Burns.

Distress in the Stomach.

There are many people who have a distress in the stomach after meals. It is due to indigestion and easily remedied by taking one of Chamberlain's Tablets after meals. Mrs. Henry Padgugan, Victor, N. Y., writes: "For some time I was troubled with headache and distress in my stomach after eating, also with constipation. About six months ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They regulated the action of my bowels and the headache and other annoyances ceased in a short time." For sale by all dealers.
